Traver Hollow Bridge Burning Attempted

WEST SHOKAN — Someone with a penchant for direct action tried to burn down the Traver Hollow Bridge Saturday night, a year to the day after it was closed by the New York City Board of Water Supply for repairs.

Only minor damage was done to the bridge thanks to the volunteer efforts of two Town of Olive constables who staked it out after overhearing a conversation in a local tavern that indicated an attempt might be made to burn it down.

Constables Lloyd Humphrey and William Kassor concealed themselves near the bridge after dark and at 10:20 p.m. investigated a suspicious sound. They found a gasoline-soaked tire and other debris piled along the base of wooden scaffolding being used by workmen repairing the bridge. A radio call brought the Olivebridge, West Shokan, Shokan and Boiceville fire companies to the scene and the fire was put out without incident.

Firemen en route to the fire noticed a car speeding away from the West Shokan end of the bridge and marked down the license number. Olive constables and Board of Water Supply police later arrested four suspects but released them for lack of evidence. Names of the suspects were not revealed.

The bridge, on Route 28-A between West Shokan and Boiceville, has been a source of contention since it was closed last year as unsafe. In addition to disrupting traffic to and from the western part of the Town of Olive, its closing has caused serious problems for fire companies, the Olive First Aid Squad, and other agencies furnishing services in which speed is a vital factor. An ambulance ride from West Shokan to Boiceville, which normally takes five minutes, now takes 45.

Dr. John Keough, business administrator of the Onteora Central School District, said that the detour had added $22,000 to the district's busing contracts for the 1976-77 school year.

Local officials, aided by Assemblyman Maurice D. Hinchey, D-101st Dist., are trying to persuade the city to at least build a detour across city-owned land that would improve on the present 14-mile detour. Hinchey said the increased cost of school busing alone would justify such an expenditure and said he would introduce legislation to keep New York City from closing bridges and roads it owns upstate without state permission.

New York City says it is willing to spend the estimated $1.3 million needed to build a new bridge over Traver Hollow but says it might takes a take as long as three years to complete.

The bridge was first closed for repairs after a safety inspection, but later inspections revealed serious structural damage and city officials announced that it would be cheaper to build a new bridge than to attempt to bring the old one up to standards.

Olive Councilman Robert Adsit, chairman of the constables' committee, commended Humphrey and Kassor for their off-duty and out-of -uniform work at the bridge.

UCCC's Graduates Told to Recall Past

STONE RIDGE — The graduating class of Ulster County Community College was urged to recognized the ties between past and present Sunday by Robert T. Brown, president, and Herbert H. Cutler, president of the Ulster County Historical Society, at the school's twelfth commencement Sunday.

Brown, referring to the historical sites near the campus and the important revolutionary era events which took place in the Kingston area, said, "This all demonstrates our sense of history."

"This continuity," Brown added, "is something that we hope will always continue and is something you should be ever mindful of."

Tracing the history of education in the Hudson Valley from the earliest Dutch settlements, Herbert Cutler noted that the first Dutch schoolmaster in the area arrived in 1633.

Despite his assignment to "set a moral standard for the edification of youth,", Cutler said, schoolmaster Adam Roelansten "was an early and successful apostle of graft on Manhattan Island."

"The first schoolmaster in Esopus," Cutler said, "came to the area before the buidling of the stockade, for his house in the Ponchockie section was burned in 1658."

"As early as 1769 there were designs for opening an academy in Kingston," he noted. "The Kingston Academy opened in May 1774 and appears to have met with very great success from the commencement."

Efforts to establish a college in the Ulster County area date back to 1779, Cutler said.

" Less than two years after Kingston had been reduced to ashes by the British, the trustees of the Town attempted to obtain a college charter in Kingston."

A later attempt in 1804 failed "partly because a large part of the subscription fund was in Ulster and Delaware Turnpike stock of questionable value," Culter said.

Mrs. George F. Bushnell, chairman of the college board of trustees termed last year "one of the most successful" in the history of the college. She noted the school has been reaccredited by the Middle States Association for up to 10 years.

Mrs. Bushnell yesterday conferred the position of Professor Emeritus on Dr. Erna Moss, a faculty member for the last thirteen years. Dr. Moss, formerly head of the Department of Foreign Languages, was designated Professor Emeritus by the Board of Trustees.

Union Head Claims Troopers Restricted

ALBANY (UPI) — The public "is being lulled into a false sense of security" by being told that restrictions on state police patrol cars have been lifted and that highway patrol units have been beefed up, according to the president of the union representing state troopers.

In fact, Patrick Carroll said this weekend, troopers are still under strict orders to shut off their motors at least 15 minutes hourly and restrict gasoline usage wherever possible.

In addition, the special speed control units assigned to certain interstate highways "are for traffic control only. The patrols will not leave the interstate highways for any reason," Carroll said.

Ulster County Sheriff Thomas Mayone, commenting on the situation today, questioned the delay in restoring the budget cuts affecting the New York State Police: "With crime sweeping up from the metropolitan areas into the Hudson Valley at an alarming rate, this unconscionable move in cutting the funding for the New York State Police must be reversed immediately. This is not the time to decrease our crime-fighting capability in Ulster County."

Carroll, head of the 3,200-member Police Benevolent Association representing troopers, said that the announcement by police officials that the mileage restrictions had been lifted was misleading.

Troopers had been told to reduce patrol mileage by 28 per cent following a $1.1 million cut in the State Police budget by Gov. Hugh Carey and a further reduction of $946,000 ordered by the legislature.

Carroll also said that a continued freeze on hiring new troopers would put police strength by the end of the year at "several hundred" below levels at the beginning of 1975 and "at least 1,000 below trooper strength recommended" by a November 1974 report by the State Division of the Budget.

"What remains is a poor patrol coverage for suburban and rural areas of the state due to budget cuts," he said.

Syrian Forces Move On Beirut

BEIRUT, LEBANON — Syrian jet fighters attacked Palestinian and leftist positions in Beirut with light missiles today and two columns of Syrian army tanks and troops advanced toward leftist Moslem strongholds on the road to the capital.

Leftist spokesmen claimed the Syrians were planning an attack on the capital itself.

Moslem gunmen fought Syrian-backed Saiqa guerrillas in the streets of the city, prompting authorities to close Beirut international airport "until further notice." The fighting was described as one of the bloodiest battles of the 14-month-old civil war.

Racial Strife Wracks London

LONDON — Hundreds of Asian youths raced through the streets of London Sunday, throwing stones at cars driven by whites and chanting "blood, blood, blood" in one of the worst racial confrontations in recent years.

The demonstrators surged to a police station and surrounded it until officers inside agreed to release two jailed comrades.

Close Gulf To Foreign Fishing

MEXICO CITY — Mexico has closed the 600-mile Gulf of California to foreign fishing and proclaimed an economic zone extending 200 miles from its Pacific and Gulf coasts to restrict fishing and offshore mining.

U.S. embassy sources said the move would not have a dramatic impact on American fishermen because there are not many fish in the affected waters and U.S. boats do not generally fish there.

Butz Blasts Food-Cancer Law

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz called "utter nonsense" a federal law banning cancer-causing additives in food.

In a speech to the Institute of Food Technologists, Butz said the 1958 law banning use as a food additive of anything found to cause cancer seemed on the surface to be a good idea.

Stakes Big in Tuesday Primaries

By UPI

With only hours to go before the windup of the long 1976 presidential primary season, all of the candidates were on the stump — rhetoric escalating, accusations flailing, promises rife.

The three states — California, Ohio and New Jersey — have close to a third of the total number of delegates needed for both the Republican and the Democratic nominations.

California is the biggest, but since it is considered all but sure to go for its Democratic governor, Jerry Brown, and its Republican ex-governor, Ronald Reagan, most of the excitement was elsewhere.

Ohio is crucial for President Ford, who must win both it and New Jersey with a big enough delegate pickup to offset Reagan's expected win of the big delegate block in California.

Ford flew to Ohio from New Jersey Sunday and scheduled a 288-mile motorcade today, insisting his television ads — which hit at Reagan's foreign policy positions — are justified by the challenger's own words.

Referring to Reagan's statements concerning the use of American troops to keep the peace in Rhodesia, Ford's commercial said: "Governor Reagan could not start a war. President Reagan could."

The Reagan camp called it unfair and underhanded. But there was no indication it would be withdrawn.

Reagan returned to California Sunday for a final day of blitzing his home state,

Ohio could be just as crucial for the Democratic candidates. A big Jimmy Carter win there, it is generally conceded, would all but cinch the nomination for the former Georgia governor.

But a loss either to Morris Udall — it would be his first win — or to Frank Church, who entered late but has campaigned hard, would be a severe blow to his stretch drive and might bring him yet another opponent: Hubert Humphrey.

Humphrey, who cinched 51 of his home state's 65 delegates Sunday, says he will "reassess" his position once the primaries are over — unless Carter wins Ohio with enough delegates to put him within reach of the prize.

Udall said Tuesday is "judgment day," and told a crowd in Parma, Ohio: "if Jimmy Carter wins big here in Ohio, it's all over — you know who your nominee is going to be."

Carter seeks to overcome Jewish voters' misgivings about him with a strong stand on Israel's future. In a speech Sunday he pledged an "absolute" commitment to Israel's security.

Stockade Area Is Still in Limbo

KINGSTON — The question of whether an eightblock area of uptown Kingston is legally a "Stockade Area," remains unresolved today as the City of Kingston and Ulster County argue the moral as well as legal aspects of the historic designation.

Meanwhile members of Kingston Historic Landmarks Commission have indicated their concern that if the stockade ordinance cannot be enforced with regard to government property, it will be even more difficult to enforce it in the private sector.

Last week, County Attorney Abram Molyneaux determined that legally there is no such things as the Stockade Area because the city failed to carry out the local law it passed to create the area. Molyneaux claimed the city was neglectful in not amending its zoning map and delineating the area on the map.

The county attorney took exception to Ulster County Minority Leader Louis Klein's contention that the county's investment in the Buick property in the Stockade Area was endangered because of the area's historical designation. Molyneaux countered saying there is no such thing as the Stockade Area.

One member of the Landmarks Commission, Paul Scogna found it disconcerting that " someone who understands the intent of the ordinance would override it on the basis of some legality."

Scogna feels it is an extension of the attitude of the county regarding the city with the city getting the " dirty end of the stick."

He admonished the county for doing whatever it feels like in the city and in spite of the city.

An attempt by the city to conform with the letter of the law in carrying out the stockade ordinance was made several weeks ago when Mayor Francis R. Koenig instructed Corporation Council Aaron Klein to amend the zoning ordinance. Klein maintains that a map of the area is on file and meets the requirement of the law.

Under the present cicumstances, if decisions concerning use of properties in the Stockade Area are to be argued they will probably have to be argued in the courts, according to Harry Rigby, city historian and member of the Landmarks Commission.

Rigby recalled that the city's interest in the Buick property was in wishing to keep in on the tax rolls. The county bought it and is now demolishing it with an eye toward constructing a colonial parking lot.

Concerned with the aesthetics of the area, Rigby said the commission is not as concerned with the loss of the garage as it is with the fact that another part of the Stockade is being blacktopped. As for the colonial design planned for the parking area, he chided county planners saying he doesn't remember that in colonial days we had automobiles.

He took exception to the county making laws for the city, and muddying the waters. And he sees no validity in the county's contention.

At one time the Landmarks Commission looked into the possible historical value of the Buick Garage building but found only one wall was of any significance. Therefore it did not object to its demolition.

It is located adjacent to the Ulster County Office Building and fronts on Main and Pearl Streets and on Clinton Avenue.

The Stockade Area is bounded by Clinton, Pearl, Main, North Front and Green streets.

The area was first designated a stockade some 300 years ago when settlers in Wiltwyck built a stockade around their tiny hamlet to protect themselves from hostile Indians.

A 1974 stockade ordinance was approved by the Historic Landmarks Commission to hopefully protect the district from some modern hostiles, parking lots, neon and glass.

Finkle Aiming for Treasurer

KINGSTON — Harold E. Finkle, Kingston, appears to be the new top contender for the Republican nomination for county treasurer after C. Freeman Lasher's withdrawal from the race during the weekend.

Finkle, 59, an executive with First Albany Corp., suddenly announced for the post when Lasher pulled out to avoid risking a loss of GOP strength in the legislature.

Lasher said his decision was prompted by last week's New York State Supreme Court decision that invalidated a local law, adopted last January, allowing the county legislature to fill its own vacancies. The decision restores the privilege of filling vacancies to the governor.

The ruling jeopardized Lasher's seat as well. If elected treasurer, he would have been forced to resign as legislator in Dist. 3.

Realistically, the Ulster County Republican leadership could expect Gov. Hugh Carey, a Democrat, to appoint Democrats to replace both Spada and Lasher. That would reduce the GOP majority in the County Legislature to a mere five votes (19 Republicans to 14 Democrats).

The slim edge could prove too close for comfort. A simple majority is not, by law, sufficient to enact certain legislation.

With the county Republican convention scheduled at the Walnut Grove in Kingston this Tuesday night, Republican strategists were forced to reverse the decision to back Lasher's bid for treasurer to forestall reduction of the county GOP majority.

Lasher announced during the weekend he prefers to keep his present seat. That paved the way for a new candidate .

Finkle, an investment executive with the First Albany Corp., has been in investment management for 30 years and is familiar with the fiscal operations of the New York and American stock exchanges. He also served on the Temporary Catskill Study Commission.

Finkle said his decision to run "came very fast."

"I'm going to go all the way," he added. He's already made contact with all GOP committeemen in the county and held committee meetings in five towns.

In trying to capture the post held by Republican Fred H. DuBois, who's resigning after 18 years, Finkle said he'd run the office with the same "integrity" as DuBois. "It's always been above criticism during his tenure," he said.

The Car Rolled for a Stroll

A small car with an urge to roam decided about 8 p.m. last night not to wait for its owner, Sylvia Day of Woodstock, to return from dinner. The auto rolled out of a restaurant parking lot, across Route 212, then cruised down Route 375 and traveled halfway across the pedestrian walkway on Millstream Bridge. Rescuing the car from a sticky situation were Woodstock Constables Michael Grehl and George Hess. Damage to the bridge, the car, and the car's ego was minor.

WHAT IS A BROTHER ?
A brother is someone especially likable.
He has a great sense of humor & loves to tease.
He's the one you can depend on when you need him,
and he does the nicest things for you...
When you least expect them.
A brother is someone you always want the best for
...because he deserves it.
And tho' he may disagree with you now & then,
He'll always stand by you & you know it...
Life is not the same without him.
I often sit and think of him, and then the teardrops fall...
For tho' there are many in this world,

Beame Renews Appeal For University

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mayor Abraham Beame has renewed his appeal to the state legislature for funds to make it possible for the City University to reopen for final examinations.

The mayor, in a statement Sunday, said the 270,000-student university, shut since it was unable to meet a payroll May 29, "will remain closed unless all concerned parties work together on a fair and equitable solution."

The mayor urged passage of a $24 million appropriation that would enable CUNY to complete the school year. "How long, in conscience, can we ask our young people to wait for action to redeem our promise of opportunity and safeguard their fair chance for higher education?" Beame asked.

Beame, noting that the Board of Higher Education has already moved to impose tuition fees at CUNY at a level comparable with that at the State University, reiterated his plea that the legislature grant aid to CUNY on the same basis as that given to the state system.

"How can we justify parity of tuition but deny parity of funding?" the mayor asked, adding that the state contributes $3,000 per student to SUNY and only $1,000 for each CUNY student.

Pay Raises Eyebrows

NEW YORK — Consolidated Edison's giving its chairman, Charles F. Luce, a $40,000 annual pay raise while asking the Public Service Commission for a $249.8 million rate increase has raised some eyebrows — particularly at City Hall.

"We would hope that any consideration of increases in executive level salaries ... would be seriously looked at by the Public Service Commission in light of (the) ... rate increase request," a spokesman for Mayor Abraham Beame said Sunday, commenting on Luce's raise.

The utility's board of trustees offered and Luce accepted the 25 per cent pay boost last week, a company spokesman said. Friday, Con Ed officials asked the PSC for a 10.4 per cent rate increase, citing inflation and the need to maintain the security of investments.

Betty Chavis Named 'Black Achiever'

BETTY CHAVIS

KINGSTON—Betty Chavis has made it on the job and off the job.

Mrs. Chavis was recently named a Black Achiever in the annual awards program sponsored by the Harlem Branch of the YMCA. Last year, she was a runnerup.

The Black Achiever program is designed to show young people that blacks can advance in business and industry and make significant contributions to local communities.

Mrs. Chavis joined the New York Telephone Company 24 years ago as an operator and moved through the ranks to her present position an assistant manager of operator services at the company's Kingston toll office.

She serves as recording secretary of the Coach House Players and recently spent part of her vacation serving as production manager for a comedy presented by the Players. The job was a challenge since fire had destroyed sets, costumes and lighting equipment.

"We had to start from scratch," says Mrs. Chavis. "It presented some unusual problems but in the long run it was worth the effort because the proceeds help youngsters go to college."

Mrs. Chavis once wanted to be a teacher, but gave up that goal after attending college for several years. However, she's still spent a lot of time in the classroom, training new operators. She is a member of the Big Sisters' organization. She advises a church youth group and helped organize a youth group sponsored by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. She's active in a parent teacher organization even though her daughter has long since been graduated from the school.

She encourages youngsters to "have a little initiative and succeed on your own. When you do something yourself, you appreciate the accomplishment much more, she says.

Betty Chavis should know. That's the way she's done it.

Similar groups are invited to utilize the house for meetings or small dinner parties. Reservations should be made with Mrs. Pritchard at the Drop-In Center.

RAH was organized through the joint efforts of several local agencies concerned with handicapped persons. Five of these agencies are in the United Way of Ulster County.

Church Men Display Culinary Talents; Bridal Show Features Gowns from 1820

By Susan B. Matson
Special Correspondent

ACCORD — The clink of special occasion china and the rustle of wedding gowns were the happy sounds in the Rochester Reformed Church in Accord on a recent Friday evening. More than 100 women and girls enjoyed a Mother-Daughter Salad Supper prepared and served by the men of the church. Following dinner a bridal fashion show brought "oohs and aahs" from the crowd.

Mrs. Linda Martin was coordinator of the event. Bud Stedge was in charge of the kitchen. Each of the tables was attractively set in a wedding theme by two hostesses who also made a wedding cake to serve as centerpiece and dessert.

Church men displayed culinary talents preparing a wide variety of salads tastefully garnished and served from an appealing buffet. Waiters with towel-draped arms served coffee with special flair.

Following presentation of gifts by Mrs. Martin for the oldest mother, newest mother, mother with the most daughters, the most recent bride and the woman married the longest, and the family with the most generations present, a bridal fashion show was presented in the church sanctuary.

Leading off the show was the wedding dress of Jeanne Bollin's great grandmother, worn in Wales around 1820. A handmade dress of dark colored brocade taffeta with dark apron, a shawl and hat, it offered sharp contrast to today's gowns.

Rosewitha Davis' great grandmother was married in 1843 in Austria in a gown of dark green taffeta which was modeled by nine-year-old Sherry Martin, showing how tiny great grandmother must have been.

In 1868 Marion Sahler's grandmother was wed in a gown of complex design with bustle, lamb's wool padding in the bust area and much intricate detail. Some extensive research was required to learn how this dress was made and worn.

Cultural contrast was offered as Mrs. Sharon Wong modeled her exquisite white satin reception gown. Handmade by her mother in the Oriental style, Mrs. Wong's gown was embroidered in pink sequins and beads with symbolic dragon, for a man, and pheasant, symbolizing a woman. Gold jewelry, a gift from the bride's mother, carry through these symbolisms also.

A total of nineteen gowns worn by brides from 1820 to the 1970's brought back floods of memories and sparked conversations of wedding tales as women recalled special wedding days and little girls dreamed of theirs yet to come.

The wedding gowns will go back to closets and attic trunks, but the memories renewed and shared will leave a special glow for some time to come.

'Cloth and the Anatomy' Is Theme For BOCES Garment Design Show

KINGSTON—"Cloth and the Anatomy" was the theme and garments were designed and made by the students of the Ulster County BOCES Garment Design Class for the fashion show presented recently at Kingston High School Auditorium.

Of special interest was the recreation of an Oscar DeLa Renta original on stage by Joyce Howard and Denise Webber. The famous designer had made the dress with great acclaim at a showing in Tokyo, Japan., and the class decided to try it. The garment was designed from two huge squares of fabric. A slash was made for the blouse neckline in a chiffon polyester print; and a single slash for the waistline was cut in a matching polyester knit for the skirt. It was worn over a body suit.

Models for the show were Mary Ellen Coddington, Rita Eck, Tammy Ferraro, Alice Frederick, Joyce Howard, Anita Keator, Caroline Lasher, Loretta Mason, Setley McKendall, Cindy Miller, Diane Newell, Ellen Norris, Bonnie Sinsapaugh, Denise Webber, Viola Williams Patricia Williamson, Mary Van Leuven, Kathleen Ferrari, Charles Crimi, Mark Elia, Parker Black, Vincent Bitonte and Warren DuBois.

Ushers were Roxanne Hill, Patricia Williamson, Kathy Coddington, Debbie Scriber, Betty Bell.

Dressers were Debbie Carr, Debbie Tetta and Lory Lasher.

Maria Forlini was coordinator and class instructor. Donald Germain was master of ceremonies and Sherry Rotella and Setley McKendall were commentators. Also assisting in the show were Dr. Jack Roosa, Michael Aronica, Caroline Lasher, Herb Miller, Glen Schwenk, Mrs. Raymond Rignall, Maryanne Palumbo of Montgomery Ward Charm School, Mrs. Shirley Dippel, Jude Thaddeus.

Merchants of the area assisting the students with various aspects of the show were Burgevin Florist, Rosendale Florist, Exposito Tuxedo Shop; Halpern's Manufacturing Co. Tickets, programs and posters were supplied by the BOCES's Printing Class and hair styling by the BOCES's Cosmetology Class.

Dear Abby

Is Topic Worth a 13 Cent Stamp?

DEAR ABBY: While buying postage stamps at the post office, the man behind me complained to the stamp clerk that the price of postage was about to break him.

The postal employee said, Well, either deliver the letter yourself or call long distance!

That postal employee should bear these facts in mind: Since 1956, long-distance telephone rates have been DECREASED 14 times and increased only twice!

On the other hand, look at what has happened to the postal rates: First Class 1956— 3 cents 1963— 5 cents 1968— 6 cents 1971— 8 cents 1974—10 cents 1975—13 cents (First ounce and 11 cents for each additional ounce. Airmail: 1956—5 cents; 1958—7 cents;1964—8 cents;1968—10 cents; 1971—11 cents; 1074—13 cents; 1975—(All first class mail now goes air.) WOONSOCKET

DEAR WOON: It's still a bargain. And that last increase has had a sobering effect on us. Now we stop and wonder if what we have to say is really worth 13 cents.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a grown man, well over 21, and I've had enough experience along this line to know better, but I got myself into a tight spot.

About six months ago I started dating this cute young chick, and we really dug each other. The problem is, I did mention marriage, but I most definitely did not say when.

Well, I really don't want to get married, Abby. I've been that route and it's not for me, but you know how it is when the lights are low and the music gets to you—a guy makes a lot of campaign promises.

I guess this chick told her mother and all her friends that we're getting married sometime late summer. Abby, I'm not about to marry this gal or anybody else right now, so what should.I do?—TALKS TOO MUCH

DEAR TALKS: A man who makes campaign promises is definitely a candidate, so prepare to run—in one direction or the other.

DEAR ABBY: Because you are able to solve so many diverse problems, I am presenting mine.

In our home we have color TV, which is on almost all of the time. It is situated so that I am very close to it while I am in my kitchen doing my laundry.

I have read that radiation from color TV can be dangerous, so I don't dare do the laundry while the TV is on.

My husband insists that I am being foolish to worry about the radiation. What are the facts?—MRS. S.

DEAR MRS. S.: After considerable research, the consensus is that the radiation from a color TV is so minimal, it is no threat whatsoever, so go ahead and do your laundry, lady.

Freeman Readers Write

Answering Mones

Dear Editor:

This letter is in response to Legislator Mones' diatribe which appeared in the Letters to the Editor section of the May 27th Freeman.

While I am not attempting to answer Mr. Mones for Jim Gilpatric, who I'm sure Will respond in appropriate fashion, in his own right, Mr. Mones opened the door by his sarcastic reference to me, and as would normally be expected, I have chosen to accept his invitation.

Mr. Mones asks why the majority of Democratic legislators from the City of Kingston refused to back the Republican sponsored sales tax proposal in March of this year. Perhaps if he paid more attention to legislative debate and local news reporting he'd know the answer. Nonetheless I'll answer the question, again. We Democratics believed, as did some fiscally concerned Republican legislators, that if the sales tax option was approved so as to enable the legislature to enact a sales tax during this calendar year, the sales tax would have been used to mask the financial problems of Ulster County government, without cutting spending. As a matter of fact, the freeze in spending implemented by the legislature was only acted upon when it became obvious that the sales tax option would not be approved unless the legislature demonstrated fiscal responsibility and concern. Had Mr. Mones and the majority of his Republican colleagues not received this message, the likely result would have been unrestrained growth in county spending.

Earlier this year, the county legislature announced its intention to reduce the size of county government through an attrition program. Attrition means that when a position is vacated, it will not be filled. Yet, only this week, after the fiscal plight of Ulster County in general, and the City of Kingston in particular, became obvious, Mr. Mones voted to fill vacancies in better than 50 positions in the social services department. He voted against only two requested positions out of about 57. To add insult to injury, Mr. Mones chided me and Legislators Hyatt, Quick, and Dwyer for adhering to the freezes which his party recommended, by voting against the filling of many of these vacancies. Yes, Legislator Mones has truly demonstrated that his concern for the public is second to his concern for the governmental bureaucracy he helped to create.

Last year, before he was re-elected to the legislature, Mel Mones told me that Mr. Savago would dread his return to the legislature, because "he would make Glenn Debrosky look liberal." Yet, to date, he has done just the opposite. He has supported the wishes of the Republican leadership almost 100 per cent of the time, but, cannot get his Republican colleagues to vote with him against "The Rape of Kingston", not even one. This speaks highly of Mr. Mones, and the quality of representation he is providing his constituents.

If Mr. Mones and the majority of his Republican colleagues don't start enforcing their own resolutions, and living up to their intent, the affect of their lethargy and lack of concern will engulf every citizen of Ulster County. If county spending continues as it is, Ulster County taxpayers will face a tax increase of at least 20 per cent in the property tax, plus an additional 1 per cent in the sales tax, or if the sales tax option is denied us, 65 per cent in the property tax. I repeat these will be minimum tax increases. More realistically, I predict that the tax increase will equal at least 30 per cent plus a 1 per cent sales tax increase, or if the sales tax option is denied us, a 75 per cent increase in the property tax.

As Mr. Mones said i n his letter to the editor, "The people can't take any more." I suggest that he start following his own advice instead of contaminating our environment with hot air pollutants. I suggest that he practice saying "no", and once he masters the word, put it to use in the Ulster County Legislature. Or, if these suggestions are unacceptable, I suggest he practice his explanation to his constituents for when they get their tax bill next year.

As to the Democratic members of the legislature, Mr. Mones may rest assured that his rhetoric will not silence our efforts. We believe, and will continue to believe that it is a far more acceptable alternative to compel our department heads to utilize economic restraint, than to compel our taxpayers to forfeit their homes to Ulster County at delinquent tax sales.

Yours sincerely,
LOUIS M. KLEIN
Minority Leader , Ulster County Legislature

Demeaning Wage

Dear Editor:

In Tuesday's Freeman, Mr. George Lawrence's letter talked about "work not demeaning," and his attack on those young men on unemployment and welfare. Let's set things straight.

Every week I see articles in the Freeman concerning unemployment. Thousands out of work, employers unable to find qualified employes. I hear of men and women that are unwilling to work. Some say they're lazy and content with what our government agencies give them. I say that's a lot of bunk.'

Recently, I was laid off from a large manufacturing company in Poughkeepsie. I knew it would be tough on the small amount I'd collect on unemployment. (I didn't know it at the time, but the lay off was only for two weeks- now I'm back at work.) Although I had only been there a few years, and on the bottom of th e ladder, I made a good wage, over four dollars per hour, plus many good company benefits, medical, retirement, etc.

While unemployed, getting $81.00 a week on unemployment, I figured I'd better get another job quickly. I began the rounds, applications everywhere, answering the classified ads by resume, letter, in person, and even through employment agencies.

Finally' a break. A local company, Dana Manufacturing in Port Ewen had an ad in the Freeman, "Wanted: experienced drill press, punch press, screw mached operators, etc.," so I sent off the resume. I knew I'd qualify, I had the experience and know-how. I was called, and waited an hour for the interviewer. He told me that I was what he needed and he wanted me to start immediately. Great? No'. Because of my experience I was to receive $2.50 per hour. I was shocked'. Can any family man, anyone with any bills, house or apartment, live and eat on $2,50 an hour?

Well, Mr. Lawrence, you say no work is demeaning. That wage was demeaning to me.

I could get $81.00 on unemployment or $100.00 gross by working, with a net take home pay of $72.00. I could stay home and make an extra $9.00. That's not lazy, that's economics.

The crux of the problem seems to be low wages. Why not pay some decent wages? Try answering some of the ads in the Freeman classifieds, ask about the wage. Some area businessmen make me laugh and others bring me to the brink of profanity.

The next time one of you people on welfare or unemployment faces a local businessman who offers you a demeaning wage of $2.30 or $2.50 an hour, ask him if he can live on it. Then drive uptown past his estate or down to the creek by his yacht, or take a look at his Caddy in the driveway, think about it.

The problem is hoarding by the man, and starvation and poverty for the people of the area.

Let's hope some of those big wheels wake up and start paying adequate wages. Salaries that are justified by experience, job requirements, longevity, and the cost of living. There are a lot of us out here who want to work, just treat us fairly, like human beings. A decent wage, that's all.

Grateful Hospital

Dear Editor:

The community response to the recent Zonta Walkathon in support of the Renal Dialysis Unit at the Kingston Hospital was most gratifying. There was a large and enthusiastic crowd of "walkers" and tremendous support given by the "sponsors."

The proceeds from this event will benefit the patients who will be receiving renal dialysis treatments. For each patient the first three months of renal dialysis therapy will not be covered by medical insurance. The costs would be prohibitive for those persons needing one, two or three treatments per week. The money collected from this Walkathon will help defray these costs and enable these patients who would otherwise not be able to afford it to receive the therapy they desperately need.

We at the Kingston Hospital are sincerely grateful to the community and to the public-spirited members of Zonta who organized the walk, most especially Kay Sullivan and Mickey Duncan.

Takes Exception

Dear Editor:

I find Nicholas von Hoffman's comments about Israel in a recent issue of the Freeman intemperate, inaccurate and insensitive.

Israel is the only democracy in the Mideast unlike Syria to which von Hoffman likened Israel. Unlike the Arab nations-many of whose wealth is prodigal- the emphasis Israel places on culture and the arts in spite of its serious economic plight is phenomenal. Israel is the only Mideast country whose citizens do not engage in hijacking, violence and guerrilla viciousness euphemistically called "guerrilla warfare". Its governance of the victims of Arab intransigence under its mandate is carried out in a way that is unparalleled by any other victorious nation. When its enemies engage, as they recently did, in fomenting violence, Israel takes the necessary measures to protect herself; to do otherwise would be absurd.

Israel needs no apologies from anyone; its courage and determination in the face of the climate in the UN is admirable and merits the admiration of every lover of freedom and advocate of democracy.

The Arabs have exacerbated the refugee problem. They could have cared for the refugees while protesting their plight and could have made their lot less onerous. Instead, they preferred to allow their own people to suffer, a fact that Israel would not and does not permit- a fact that makes her supreme among the nations of the world in her concern for her people.

Critics like von Hoffman are either ill-informed or misinformed. In that case they had better remain silent.

Sincerely,
SYLVIA DAY

Cutbacks and Red Tape

WASHINGTON — Millions of American workers are exposed to deadly, poisonous substances on the job. Yet the effort to save their health, perhaps even their lives, has been seriously hampered by cutbacks and red tape.

The best estimate is that one out of every three workers in this country will come down with occupational diseases. Toxic substances, according to another estimate, causes 100,000 job-related deaths each year.

Yet even this disturbing death figure is now considered far too low. Labor Dept. experts have just learned that most of the nation's doctors are unable to diagnose occupational diseases. This means that most deaths from occupational diseases go unreported.

The Labor experts have also discovered that occupational injuries account for an alarming 96 per cent of all reported illnesses at nonagricultural places of work. Yet, industrial plants provide few health services and almost no environmental monitoring.

The Labor Dept. has appealed to Congress for more help to cope with the problem. Of 2,000 industrial hygienists in the United States, only 135 work for the department. Training programs have also been cut back.

As one Labor official told our associate Marc Smolonsky: "There is an appalling lack of manpower." Meanwhile, the problem steadily gets worse, not better, as thousands of new chemicals are developed each year in factories across the country.

The department has tried to set standards for these toxic chemicals as they appear. But President Ford, whose main emphasis is upon cutting costs, requires an inflationary impact statement before new standards can be put into effect. This has slowed the regulatory effort.

Nevertheless, a small, unsung staff is fighting a heroic battle to safeguard workers from occupational disease and death. Hundreds of thousands will die, however, because the problem has been given a low priority.

LIVING IN SIN: Some congressmen keep mistresses; others live in sin with the special interests.

The darling of the banking lobby, for example, is Rep. Thomas Ludlow Ashley, D.-Ohio. Whatever the bankers want from Congress, the bankers usually get. And Ashley helps them get it.

His service for the nation's financial institutions, coincidentally, helps to boost his own net worth. For he owns stocks and bonds in American Financial Corp., a blue-chip institution that owns, among other things, Cincinnati's Provident Bank where Ashley has a loan.

Banks are regulated by federal agencies which, in turn, are overseen by Congress. This is delegated to the Banking and Currency committees of the Senate and House, which also hand le banking and housing legislation.

Ashley is the third man on the totem pole at the House Banking Committee. From his No. 3 perch, he exercises maximum influence with minimum visibility.

The late chairman, Wright Patman, D.-Texas, distrusted bankers instinctively. But invariably, Ashley would rally a majority of the members who routinely would overrule Patman and would vote more benefits for banks.

Once Ashley called a rump session to approve a banking bill that Patman had tried to block. While Patman was away, Ashley summoned the probanking members behind closed committee doors. For secrecy's sake, they worked without lights.

Ashley has always found the bankers most appreciative. At election time, they have often showered Ashley with more campaign money than he really needs. For he usually runs a low-key campaign, which costs comparatively little.

Once, the Ohio Bankers Assn. wrote to bank presidents across the state, urging them to support the congressman "in every possi ble way."

During his last campaign, Ashley spent barely $23,000 on his election race. Of this, banking associations, financial groups and bank executives contributed over $5,000.

After he was re-elected again, Ashley collected another $3,250 in honorariums last year for speeches to the Mortgage Bankers, American Bankers Assn., Ohio Citizens Trust Co., Ohio Savings and Loan Assn. and the New York Savings Banks Assn.

Ashley congenially pooh-poohed any suggestion of impropriety in his relationships with financial institutions. His holdings in American Financial Corp., he said, don't amount to much. He speaks to financial groups, he explained, to tell them about financial legislation.

"I don't have any problem with conflict of interest," he said emphatically. "Absolutely none. I can look anybody straight in the eye and say that."

What Gives Sex a Bad Name

The colossal mistake of this generation is called Equality of Sex. Not, mind you, equality of the sexes, which nullifies the dominance of females by males. Equality of sex, on the face of it, gives to women and men the same right to virtues and vices.

It is not a law; it is an asserted right. Surely it is just for women to have the same right to sex as men. The pages of history depict the woman as the sexual object, or target, of the male.

Tacit equality emerged in the 1960s. It was, we thought, a good thing. The role of sexual aggressors was new to the gentle sex, and most observers were sure that the females would use their new power to raise the moral standards of the male.

The opposite is true. Women are using their new "right" to abase themselves with any man in any bed at any time. The men never had it so good. The natural magnetism of women, which once brought young men to the altar, has degenerated into a series of one-night stands. Moral values are almost valueless.

Ladies who refuse to play the game endure lonely nights. Venereal disease, which has always been the grinning skeleton of sexual freedom, has hit new highs all over the nation. Which leads to a melancholy question of philosophy: Have women become their own worst enemies?

The remarkable aspect of sex is that the roles of male versus female are constant throughout the animal kingdom: The male prowls for a mate; the female selects the male she most admires, or loves, and follows "wither he goest." From humans down through moose to mouse, the females of the species have never sold themselves cheaply.

There is a poignance in recalling that the old-time prostitute, who had no rights to her body, took the money and then begged, "First tell me you love me." She required that little fiction as an excuse for debasing herself. Today all a boy has to do is to array his toothbrush next to hers and they are in business.

You are not being addressed by a pietistic "square." This particular soul was blackened some time ago by all the lovely sins. Regret erases nothing. Nor would I change anything if I had it to do over again. My admiration for the female is as unalterable as my love for the sea.

Nor will anyone entice me to state that the next generation is going to hell in a hand basket. Not all women are promiscuous. The point is that a good segment of our womanhood have lowered their standards of morality.

In Detroit, Dr. Gertrude Zemon-Gass says: "Many people state that people are just more open about extramarital infidelity, that people are talking about it more. I disagree. It is increasing."

It is easy to find a virtuous wife. It is almost impossible to find one who has been unfaithful only once. Decades ago, Kinsey learned that 26 per cent of married women admitted they had violated their marriage vows at least once. No marriage counsellor is willing to make a statistical guess today.

"Women are beginning to go outside marriage for sexual satisfaction," says Dr. William Nichols, "something they have not done in the past." I disagree. The difference between then and now is the difference between shame and arrogance.

Man's worst misconception was in believing that women had no sexual desires. Eleanor Roosevelt told her daughter Anna that sex was something a wife must learn to "endure." Those were the bad old days. My mother told my sister that she went to the marital bed "with a pillow over my face."

It is a long step forward to conceding that women have the same sexual desires as men and achieve the same joys. Surely God would not have invented sex if it was not to be a great thing for two people.

Abuse is what gives sex a bad name. A casual glance at history shows that the Greeks and Romans remained great only as long as their moral fiber was high. Orgy led to anarchy. Anarchy led to defeat. Defeat led to dissolution. It's as easy as falling down a flight of stairs.

The monumental error of science was not in devising an atom bomb. It's the pill. This little contraceptive took the fear out of sex for women. Women swallowed the pill and demanded what they called sexual freedom.

When Moses came down from the mountain, he had 10 Commandments. One was: "Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's wife." If God knew then what He knows now, He might have included an 11th: "Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's husband."...

Oil on Troubled Coal

WASHINGTON - Some of the people in West Virginia are trying to figure out what happened to about 50 billion tons of low-sulfur Appalachian coal. It was there in U.S. Bureau of Mines' estimates of coal reserves until the mid or late '60s and then it vanished. Since that's enough coal to take care of our needs for at least 50 years, the West Virginia people are reasonably sure they would have noticed if somebody had come, dug it up and shipped it out.

What happened, of course, is that it got redefined as high-sulfur coal and was shifted over to another column in the tables. That's bad news for West Virginia and the coal-producing regions of neighboring states since the high-sulfur stuff is regarded as an environmental hazard and can't be burned.

At the same time the nation has been told not to worry its pretty little head about such matters because there's plenty of low-sulfur, healthy coal out west. You can't have missed that message with all those "thought you'd like to know" television commercials sponsored by Exxon.

The fact that it's Exxon which is passing on this reassuring information gives rise to a question: Is the environmental safety of various kinds of coal determined by its chemical properties or by who owns it? Western coal ownership is dominated by oil companies and railroads. The latter stand to make a double buck out of it, first from the coal itself and then the profits of shipping it. That may explain this interesting quote by George R. Powe of Burlington, Northern Inc.:

"Ours is both a transportation and a natural resources firm. We have minable coal reserves estimated at more than 11.4 billion tons, chiefly in Montana and North Dakota. Much of this coal lies in thick deposits close to the surface where it can be mined cheaply... In addition to the use of western coal by Detroit area utilities, western coal will move by rail and barge to power plants in the Middle West and East, even to West Virginia, the nation's major coal producing state."

Until recently bringing coals to Newcastle was in the same category as selling refrigerators to Eskimos. Now it appears it's on its way to becoming national fuel policy.

You can't help wondering if eastern coal would be so environmentally obnoxious if there were a different pattern of ownership in Appalachia. The oil companies haven't been able to nuzzle their way into the region as they have in the west. By tradition, contacts and knowledge it's been relatively easy for them to lease government-owned coal fields in the west, while eastern coal ownership is private and, to a considerable degree, broken up into smaller holdings. Thus oil with its dominant influence in the Federal Energy Administration has had both motive and the opportunity to kill off eastern coal in favor of the western product.

Is western coal truly safer? There is a very large amount of eastern coal - nobody knows exactly how much - that assays at significantly less than one per cent sulfur content. That makes it environmentally competitive with western coal. There's also a lot that comes in at around 1.20 to 1.30 per cent, which is above Environmental Protection Agency standards, but that doesn't necessarily knock it out of consideration.

In general eastern coal gives off much, much more heat per pound. Western coal tends to be very poor grade stuff, which means you have to burn more of it to get one kilowatt of electricity, so much more of it that, even if it has a lower sulfur content, it may still be the greater pollutant. This is especially true if a given power plant burns a combination of low- and middle-sulfur content eastern coal.

The case for the superiority of western coal hasn't been established, only the drawbacks to its use. The most obvious is to put West Virginia back on the dole. "Our mines are closing, coal prices are declining and jobs are being lost as western coal invades traditional West Virginia markets," laments the mayor of Charleston, W. Va., John Hutchinson. "At the same time we are wasting thousands of gallons of oil to bring western coal to these markets."

By contrast Appalachian coal is situated in the middle of a vast inland river complex so that it can be shipped to many of the major markets of the East and Midwest by barge, which is not only the cheapest form of transportation, but the most energy efficient. Moreover, much, though by no means all, of eastern coal is to be found under mountainous terrain that's not particularly desirable for agriculture. Every effort ought to be made to use it before we strip mine the wheat fields of North Dakota.

The decision to truck low-quality, high-cost western coal to markets more than a thousand miles away could not have been made so easily if the electric utility companies had an incentive to act in an economically judicious way. Many of them can pass increases in fuel costs directly on to their customers, so why bother shopping for price? Not all of them behave in this profligate fashion. Several years ago Duke Power in North Carolina not only signed a contract with a small West Virginia company for low-cost, low-sulfur coal, but arranged for a line of credit so that the mining company would have the capital to expand its production.

Appalachia has the single largest concentration of high-quality coal in the world. Its metallurgical coal is exported around the globe to make steel. If we're going to give up on a resource of this size and value, the least we can do is have more of a debate on it th an a couple of Exxon commercials.

Skimming a Grant from GE

(LeFever is a freelance writer who lives in West Hurley.)

When you consider the pangs the New York State Council on the Arts had to suffer to get grant money from Albany, you begin to realize that in the near future applying for an artistic grant in New York will be the last thing you do before they wheel you, laughing, off to the asylum.

It's clear to the senators that the arts belong on television, not hanging around just anywhere unpoliced. With this in mind I decided to dissociate myself from the "artistic element" and look to the sciences for my salvation.

The competition is keen, of course. Consulting firms from out of state crash in with thousands of dollars worth of equipment and barge around on the Hudson trailing laboratory vials in the water. They make a lot of money showing Central Hudson and the rest of us that so few fish will die from an atomic power plant that to be concerned about it is to play the fool indeed.

And as any right-thinking representative will tell you without even a nudge, the state doesn't need any more fools.

It's a short step from there to the realization that big business has the money these days, so I set myself to workng up a highly controlled scientific project that will appeal to some big companies and their constituents in the state government. (You know, the ones who do their voting right on the floor.)

It will be an exhaustive survey taken among the employes of General Electric throughout the country to show conclusively that PCB is nothing more than three capital letters chosen from the alphabet by conniving environmentalists and that what they secretly stand for is "Phisherman to Control Business."

Here are some of the questions I've drafted for the GE survey:

1. Do you think industrial wastes should be allowed to run freely (Remember: it's a free country) into the Hudson River? Or should the wastes be trapped at great expense, said expense to be subtracted weekly from your paycheck, and recycled to meet the unconscionable demands of wacky environmentalists? (Note: we all know that "recycling is some sort of Ralph Naderish screwball invention.) If you have read to the end of the question, check one:

☐ Yes ☐ No

2. Which is big business better for, the country or the individual? Check either:

☐ Yes ☐ Yes

(At this point the crucial question, the object of the survey, is inserted in the middle of decoy questions so the testee is unaware of its importance. This sound polling practice, as demonstrated in countless psychological tests to determine basic human needs — for example the need to exert power over others.)

3. What does PCB secretly stand for? Check one and ONLY one!

a. Grand Old Party
b. Three Penny Opera
c. Phisherman Control Business
d Grandmother's Combat Boots

(The last choice is intended for comic relief, allowing the testee a chuckle to release tension. This has been shown extremely effective in several federally funded studies to determine if Tanzanian frogs like to laugh. Now some more decoy questions.)

4. What kind of salad dressing do you like?

a. Russian
b. Italian
c. Thousand Island
d. Hudson River

NOTE: If you feel you may have answered some of the questions incorrectly go back now and make the changes you desire. Once you've handed in your paper to the proper authorities, it's TOO LATE.

I am confident this sort of controlled scientific project will appeal to the more sensible men in Albany who will then appeal to the more sensible men at, say, oh-h-h, just picking names out of a hat now, say General Electric.

I estimate the project will take about two years and, if I spend at my usual thrifty rate, cost about $90,000 plus a few extras for special services. Which is peanuts when you take a look at the military budget.

There will be travel expenses, of course, paper and pencils with erasers to be bought and salaries for assistants, who would need to be feminine and curvaceous to better advertise the importance of the project. I intend to save hotel expenses by having us all stay in one big room.

With the proper funds I'm confident I can find the proper truth.

Spate of Strikes Hits the U.S.

By United Press International

Trans World Airlines was flying today as negotiators discussed details of an unsigned tentative contract averting a strike by 5,500 flight attendants. But a bevy of disputes plagued other American industries.

A strike was planned against a railroad and contract disputes tied up shipping in northern California and the San Francisco Bay area, and threatened medical services in New York and Connecticut.

A tentative agreement was reached Saturday between TWA and Local 551 of the Air Transport Division-Transport Workers Union. Although the agreement was not signed and negotiators were still going over the language, a union spokesman said the chances of a strike appeared "very slim."

Union secretary-treasurer Jim Tuller said picketers were sent home late Saturday.

TWA carries some 43,000 passengers a day.

Some 3,000 United Transporation Union members plan a strike against the St. Louis-San Francisco railroad Tuesday in a grievance over the railroad's destruction of eating and toilet facilities in Springfield, Mo.

A railroad spokesman called the disputed facilities "old shanties," said they were no longer in use and expressed surprise at learning the UTU was preparing to walk out at 10:30 p.m. Tuesday.

A strike by members of the Teamsters Union and the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union shut down West Coast warehouses. But officials said effects of the walkout would not be felt by consumers for about three weeks because many firms increased their inventories in anticipation of a strike.

The head of New York City's 18,000-member Municipal Hospital Workers Union said the union might resort to violence if the city goes ahead with 1,450 planned layoffs and four facility shutdowns to save money.

"The membership is marvelous, but they're only people," said Lillian Roberts, associate director of District 37, who appeared at hearings by a panel selected to arbitrate the impasse between the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employes and New York's Health and Hospital Corp.

A lingering strike by some 70,000 United Rubber Workers was causing problems for the food stamp plan. The workers have been on strike against Firestone, Goodyear, B.F. Goodrich and Uniroyal tire companies for nearly seven weeks.

The strike was affecting Etowah County, Ala., where some 3,000 workers were on strike against a Goodyear plant at Gadsen.

A spokesman for the county Department of Pensions and Security said its food stamp office was turning away 50 to 60 persons a day because it was unable to process the necessary papers.

"It looks like the number will be steadily increasing unless the strike is settled this month," he said.

It Boils Down to Hubert Humphrey

This is the time of year when conversations are apt to begin with, "Well, who do you think will win the conventions?" Whether or not the asker will admit it, he or she is asking you not one question but two. The first is as phrased and the unspoken one is, "Who do you want to win—who are you for?"

Taking it simply as asked, I'll go out on my limb and say that, if I had to bet right now (even after last Tuesday's primaries), it would be that the Republicans will still end by nominating Jerry Ford for a go at the presidency in his own right and that the Democrats will choose Jimmy Carter to oppose him. Remember, please, that put "this opinion" in the "if I had to be" category; a sure fire bet I'm not prepared to make on either—yet.

But it's when I come to set my "rathers" on paper that I find the going really tough—as obviously, the majority of us have already found it.

Immediate qualification: I, personally, don't find it tough at all to say whom I would rather be the Republicans' nominee. I think of Reagan as a real threat to peace, at home as well as abroad—and I am raally sad that the party that once elected Lincoln couldn't come up with a sounder challenger to take on our Nixon—appointed president, whose track record is so spotty.

It's when I come to draw up balance sheets listing what I like and don't like about the Democrats' candidates that I feel indecision setting in.

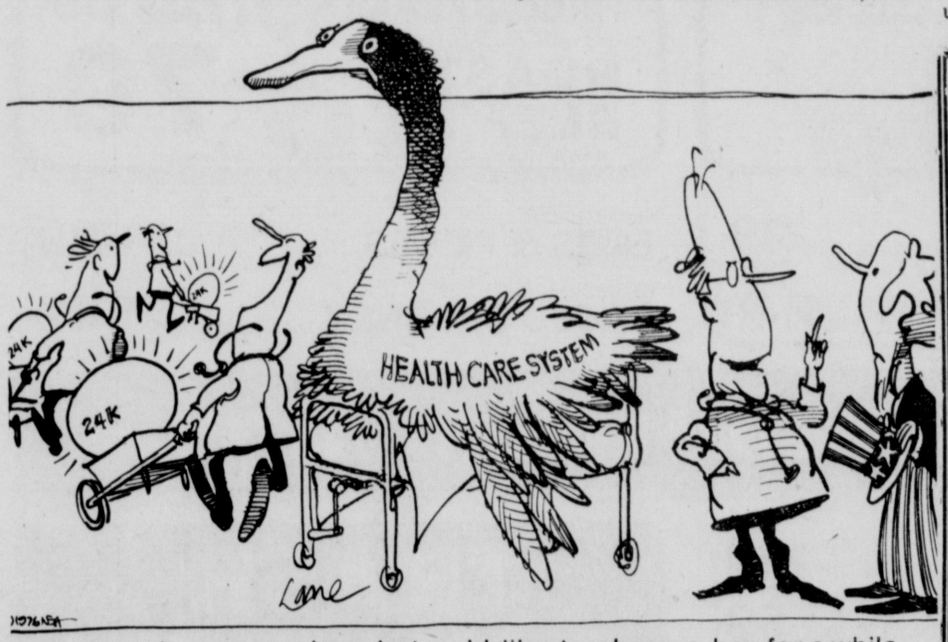
Take frontrunner Carter. I had a long list of things I felt I liked about him when he first named himself a candidate. Obviously, they were solely based on what writing about him I had come upon. But then, when the press and the tube began to focus on him, (as they most certainly should have much earlier than they did), the liability side of his ledger entries lengthened. I most certainly do not like the record of his reaction to the Vietnam horror. I find myself agreeing with his critics on his opportunism. And damn it, I have come not to like that phoney-smiling face the cameras so mercilessly thrust at me.

I liked what I'd seen and read about Brown but gave him up as a serious candiate before he said he was one. He has come in too late for me to arrive at a convincing analysis.

Of the younger candidates, I admit to a shine for Udall (and that I voted for him in a primary). But I have to admit, too, that my feeling my be influenced by having known and admired his father, who was an honest man. I think his son is, too. And God help us all because we fallible humans make choices based on such evidence—I like the face he shows me.

But somewhere deep in me is the gut feeling that the best qualified man to be our post-Nixon-and-Ford president is still old Hubert Humphrey, who has lived through so much of our history and who, I believe, has come to some kind of peace with himself. I don't believe he would be a pushover for the "special interests" that divide us now and I do believe he is a proven product, as dead straight as a politician can be, and that he would know and fight for the best in America.

So, very much in the rough, that's how I answer the question I began this piece with. My advice? Make up your own mind; it's your country and your future as well as mine. You've still the right to speak up.



"It doesn't seem serious but we'd like to observe her for a while longer."

Is There Truth After Love?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — One of the main weapons in the arsenal of militant consumers is the "truth-in."

A "truth-in" is like the "sitins" staged by civil rights militants in the 1950s and the "love-ins" held by militant peace demonstrators in the 1960s. Only different.

"Truth-ins" require some sort of legislative or government regulatory action. One example is the "Truth in Lending" law that Congress passed in response to consumer demands for public disclosure of interest rates and other credit information.

New "truth-in" proposals are constantly being put forth, the latest being a "truth in used cars" rerulation under consideration by the Federal Trade Commission.

It would require used car dealers to reveal any known defects in the vehicles they sell. Data about mileage, prior use and repairs also would have to be posted on the sticker.

Seeking a dealer's eye view of the proposal, I had a talk with "Honest Sid" Lemonpusher, who operates a used car lot in my neighborhood.

"I'm way ahead of them," he told me. "I've been disclosing that type of information for years."

He patted the fender of a 1959 Studebaker that was featured as the "Bargain of the Week."

"Get a load of this little beauty," he said. "It's only been driven 87 miles."

"What about prior use?" I asked suspiciously.

He directed my attention to the price sticker. At the bottom it said: "This auto has had only one previous owner, a little old lady who drove it one block to church on Sundays."

I said, "The proposed FTC regulation also would require you to list any repairs that were made before you offered a car for resale. Did you do any work on this one?"

"The only thing we did was replace the left rear tire. That's the one prospective buyers always kick, so we like to make sure it is sturdy enough to withstand the punishment."

"What about defects?"

"We never put a defective car on our lot," Lemonpusher said indignantly.

"Then why is a front wheel missing?"

"Now you're talking about deficiencies. There's a difference between being defective and being deficient. If a wheel won't turn, that's a defect. But if it's merely missing, that is only a deficiency."

While "Honest Sid" went to answer the telephone, I browsed around looking over some of his other bargains. I noticed that the information on their stickers was identical to that posted on the '59 Studebaker.

Sickness Strikes The Great Race

WATKINS GLEN (UPI) — Sickness, it seems, has struck the cross-country "Great American Horse Race" — but it's not the riders in the summer-long event who are under the weather.

Approximately one third of the horses involved in the $50,000 race to Sacramento, Cal., have come down with what race officials call a "cold or flu-type virus". But officials said the race would continue toward the West Coast this morning from Watkins Glen.

A race spokesman said the horses first became sick in Cortland, on the third day of the summer-long ride. By the time the nearly 30 riders reached Watkins Glen, up to 35 horses had been infected.

One of the veterinarians accompanying the riders said the virus didn't appear to be serious. He said cool, damp weather along the trail and the stress of the event had probably aggravated the situation.

A race official said all 158 horses and 86 riders stayed in Watkins Glen an extra two days to "make sure the horses are all healthy". They were scheduled to leave this morning for Cameron, and should enter Pennsylvania later this week.

The race involves riders from throughout the United States and seven foreign countries. It began in Frankfort, N.Y. on May 31st and is slated to end in Sacramento during the Labor Day weekend.

Fountainebleau Is In The Red

MIAMI BEACH (UPI) — The landmark Fountainebleau Hotel owes nearly $1.3 million in taxes, and officials say the hotel may be put up for public auction if it does not come up with the money by November.

Fred Guldstrand, a supervisor in the county tax collector's office said the Miami-Dade Metro government could sell the 1,250-room hotel at a tax auction Nov. 1, two years after the tax bills were sent out.

"We don't have the money to pay the taxes," hotel owner Ben Novack told a city council meeting last week. He said arrangements were being made "so we can pay our taxes very soon, I hope."

Despite a brisk winter tourist season, the hotel owes taxes of $563,000 to Miami Beach, $297,000 to the Dade County school system, $292,000 to Metro and $15,000 to the Central and Southern Florida Flood Control District.

Aerialist Ends His 'Wire-In'

NIAGARA FALLS, Canada (UPI) — French aerialist Henri Rechatin had his feet back on the ground today and was waiting to see if his 15-day "live-in" on a highwire had convinced authorities to give him permission to walk a wire above the roaring Niagara Falls this September.

Rechatin ended his stay on a highwire 50 feet above a street in this resort community Sunday.

A spokesman for the group sponsoring his proposed Falls walk said Rechatin was "hopeful" the live-in would "demonstrate once and for all his ability on the highwire."

"We think a walk across the Falls — which hasn't been done for 125 years — would really be one of the spectacles of the century," said Byron Cox, public relations director of Ripley International.

Rechatin, who performed stunts on the wire four times daily during the 15 days, said he still hoped to make the Falls walk even though Canadian and United States officials had not given final approval to such a performance.

Among the stunts he performed on the highwire were balancing on a chair, walking blindfolded, walking with 12-inch daggers strapped to his heels and walking on the interior rim of a bicycle wheel.

He also slept and ate his meals on the wire.

Tour Plans

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet republic of Georgia has announced new tour plans for the summer. They include visits to vineyards and subterranean caves as well as to ancient archeological sites and beauty spots.

BICENTENNIAL FACTS

No one who helped shape the American Revolution was more complex or creative than Benjamin Franklin. Franklin founded the first anti-slavery society, the first debating society, and the first American fire insurance company. He introduced subscription libraries in four colonial cities and promoted the paving, lighting, and cleaning of city streets, The World Almanac recalls.

Sailing By The Stars, With a Little Help

PAPEETE, Tahiti (UPI) — Crewmen of the sailing canoe Hokule'a think they have proved the accuracy of ancient Polynesian star navigation by completing a 34-day 2,860-mile voyage from Hawaii in a 60-foot double-hulled canoe.

But the ancient Polynesians did it better.

Crew members said over the weekend that their vessel was off course, but the crew accidentally learned of the error in an overhead radio message.

One of the principal objectives of the voyage, made by a 15-man crew and two National Geographic Society photographers, was to prove the accuracy of ancient navigation system. The canoe carried no modern navigational equipment of its own.

Crew members said the Hokule'a corrected its course after inadvertently overhearing a report on its position given by the Navy-Marine Mars radio system to the observer ship Moetai.

A spokesman said the information enabled the canoe to alter its course to the east and arrive Friday at the island of Mataiva, about 300 miles north of Papeete.

However, both the spokesman and members of the observer ship said the Hokule'a's previous heading indicated the canoe would not have veered far enough off course to miss the Society Islands altogether.

Another Violent Death For A Moon Member

NEW YORK (UPI) — A young member of the Unification Church living in the Rev. Sun Myung Moon's U.S. headquarters has become the second member of the Korean evangelist's sect to meet a violent death in a week.

Police said Allen Staggs, 20, was killed early Sunday in a fall down an elevator shaft in the former New Yorker Hotel, recently purchased by Moon for more than $5 million.

Stagg's mangled body was found inside an elevator car stopped on the second floor of the building.

His death was preceded by the fatal stabbing of another Moon follower distributing pamphlets in Brooklyn on June 1, the same day as the Moon "God Bless America Festival." There was no apparent connection between the two deaths.

Detectives said there was no immediate indication of homicide in the elevator death, and they presumed it was accidental. They said they were also investigating the possibility of suicide.

The youth apparently fell from the 20th floor and crashed through the trap door in the ceiling of the elevator car, detectives said.

One detective said the elevator must be run manually but has no permanent operator. He said those wanting to use it had to use coathangers "or other wire contraptions" to get into the car.

He said Staggs apparently thought the elevator car was on the 20th floor, opened the door with a hanger and fell down the shaft.

The New Yorker housed about 2,000 "moonies" during last week's Bicentennial rally in Yankee Stadium.

Scott Came Through at Right Time

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — Charlie Scott conserved his energy until just the right time.

The 6-foot-5 guard, who had fouled out of the first five games in the NBA championship series, scored 25 points to lead Boston to an 87-80 victory over the Phoenix Suns Sunday, giving the Celtics their 13th NBA crown in 19 years.

"It was about time," Scott said. "I knew JoJo (White) was tired after playing 61 minutes Friday night. I was not shooting real well, but they went in when we needed them.

"I had made up my mind I was going to stay in this game," Scott said. "It is really a thrill, and I think a lot of people finally understand what a good backcourt combination we have."

"I was almost out of gas after Friday," added White. "It was up to Charlie, and he played well. We were trying to do basically the same thing as in the other games although we tried a few new things, such as getting (Dave) down low."

White, star of Friday night's epic triple overtime victory, was named MVP of the series.

Cowens scored 21, White 15 and John Havlicek and Paul Silas 10 apiece as all five Celtic starters hit double figures. Boston got only six points from its bench.

Rookie of the year Alvan Adams led Phoenix with 20 points while Ricky Sobers added 19, Paul Westphal 14 and Gar Heard 11.

"The post position gets a lot of emphasis," explained Adams. "Somebody as good as Cowens is a big factor. The key is trying to keep him off the boards. I didn't do bad the first four games, but I didn't too well the last two. He got 17 rebounds, he just seemed to be in the right place."

Boston Coach Tommy Heinsohn refused to describe his team as old, but admitted they were "not young guys.

"You can press defensively and run for 48 minutes when you're young," the Celtics' coach said. "But we aren't. We've just got a spunky bunch of guys. We were determined out there. They caught up and could have gone ahead with a couple of steals, but like the Celtics of old, we kept going at it."

Heinsohn, who collapsed after Friday's triple overtime win in game five, said, "My doctor told me I had to settle down. It was difficult and you may not believe it but I was working at it. I didn't feel too good after the last win but I feel great now."

Havlicek, a 14-year veteran, played over an injured foot throughout the playoffs and looked forward to the rest and relaxation befitting a champion.

"It feels like worlds of pressure coming off," he explained. "I don't have to have any more ice on my foot, get in a whirlpool or take medication."

John MacLeod, whose Phoenix team was the Western Conference wild card entry in the playoffs, said the triple overtime loss and cross-continent flight with just one day off in between took its toll on both teams.

"Friday night's game definitely had an effect," MacLeod said. "But Boston was feeling it, too. We were worn down, physically, but our mental attitude was great. We had the chances in the fourth quarter, but a couple of good shots just wouldn't fall.

"The key to the game was on the boards. Look at Cowens, Silas and Scott, all in double figures in rebounds. It's hard to combat an effort like that." Boston took a 53-39 advantage on the boards.

With both teams sluggish after Friday, Boston moved out to a 38-33 halftime lead after Phoenix went six minutes in the second quarter with only a pair of free throws.

The Suns came back to tie the score late in the third quarter and trailed 57-56 entering the fourth. Phoenix moved to its only lead of the second half, 67-66, but two goals by Cowens put the Celtics back on top.

The Suns were within 73-71 with 4:23 left before Boston broke loose for eight straight points for a 81-71 advantage at the two minute mark. The closest the Suns could get was 84-80 with 23 seconds left.

Every Yankee Is Contributing

NEW YORK (UPI) — Dave Pagan and Oscar Gamble, two players who have seen limited action this season, revealed Sunday the one quality that has made the New York Yankees the early season favorites in the American League East.

Pagan, making an infrequent start, pitched a six-hitter for his first victory of the season and Gamble, a reserve outfielder, smacked a three-run homer with two out in the bottom of the ninth inning to give the Yankes a 5-2 victory over the Oakland A's and a split of their doubleheader. The A's won the opener 3-2 on Phil Garner's two-run single.

The one ingredient mainly responsible for the Yankees success this season has been the contribution each player on the club's 25-man roster has made in an overall team effort. Every member of the squad has made his presence felt at one time or another with Pagan assuming the unlikely role of the "stopper" Sunday when he halted New York's first serious slide of the year, a four-game losing streak. He retired the last 16 men he faced in order.

Gamble, obtained from the Cleveland Indians in the off-season, has seen relatively little action this season with the wealth of talented outfielders on the club.

The split, combined with Baltimore's doubleheader loss to the Minnesota Twins, widened the Yankees lead over the second place Orioles to 4 1-2 games in the A.L. East.

"It looked like somebody up there didn't want me to pitch," said Pagan, after making his first start of the year. "My wife didn't even come because whe thought we'd only play one game," he added, alluding to the threatening skies under which the doubleheader was played. "It was a great day, there was nothing rotten about it."

The Yankees tied the game in the ninth when Thurman Munson tripled with one out and Chris Chambliss singled him home. Following Carlos May's single, Rollie Fingers relieved Paul Lindblad and gave up a single to Graig Nettles but Claudell Washington threw out Chambliss at the plate. Gamble then belted his fifth home run of the season into the rightfield bleachers.

Vida Blue, with relief help from Fingers, gained credit for the first game victory.

Oakland's Stan Bahnsen, who had a no-hitter until Roy White singled with two out in the sixth, was driven from the nightcap in the eighth on Gamble's double and Lou Piniella's pinch-hit single, which accounted for the first New York run.

That old Paul Richards magic is working new miracles with the much-maligned Chicago White Sox pitchers.

Richards, once Hall of Famer Carl Hubbell's favorite batterymate who later contributed largely to the success of the White Sox'·Virgil Trucks and Billy Pierce in the 1950s and the Baltimore "Baby Birds" of Steve Barber, Jack Fisher, Jerry Walker and Milt Pappas of the 1960s, is making new winners of castoffs and unproven youngsters like Jesse Jefferson, Pete Vuckovich and Ken Brett.

As Vuckovich said recently: "I figure if Mr. Richards caught behind Babe Ruth, then I ought to listen to him."

Sunday, Vuckovich pitched six plus innings in the first game of a doubleheader sweep by the White Sox over the Cleveland Indians to gain his fourth win in five decisions. In the second game, Brett and Jefferson combined on a threehitter as the Chisox blanked the Tribe 5-0.

The double victory put the surprising White Sox four games over .500 (25-21) in the American League West and lent more credence to the fact that the 67-year old Richards, in his second term as Chicago manager, hasn't lost his touch.

"The big difference in coming here from the Yankees is that I'm getting a chance," said Brett who is now 3-0 with a 1.61 earned run average after being acquired by Richards from New York three weeks ago. "Paul has been helping me to slow my motion and get a more effective changeup. I now have a different grip and it's basically a new pitch."

Jorge Orta's fourth inning triple scored Lamar Johnson with the only run Brett and Jefferson needed in the nightcap, while in the opener, the White Sox eked out a 3-2 victory when Bucky Dent broke an 0-for-32 slump with a fourth inning triple and then scored what proved to be the winning run on Jim Essian's single.

Said Richards (who serves as his own pitching coach) after the latest success by his underrated pupils: "Vuckovich, Brett and Jefferson probably wouldn't have gotten their chance until the doubleheaders began mounting up. But when Wilbur Wood go hurt, they got their opportunity and they're all taking advantage of it."

Elsewhere in the American League, Minnesota swept two from Baltimore, 3-2 and 11-6; Boston put away California 4-1; Milwaukee edged Kansas City 4-3 and Texas mauled Detroit 16-6.

Red Sox 4, Angels 1

Cecil Cooper and Carl Yastrzemski knocked in two runs apiece as the Red Sox knocked oout Nolan Ryan after 3 1-3 innings. Yastrzemski's RBI single in the seventh was his 4,000th total base. Dick Pole, 2-3, went seven innings for the win.

Twins 3-11, Orioles 2-6

Larry Hisle hit a three-run homer to spark a 17-hit Twins' attack in the nightcap, while Dan Ford's solo homer with one out in the ninth won the opener. Ford, who now has 33 RBI, also had a a pair of two-run singles in the second game. Bill Singer, in his first start since coming over from Texas in the Bert Blyleven trade, won the opener, outdueling Jim Palmer.

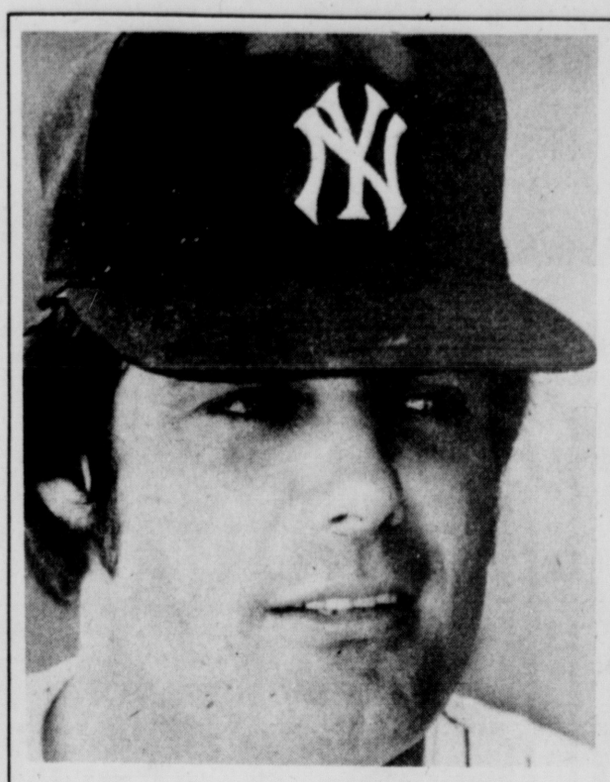
Brewers 4, Royals 3

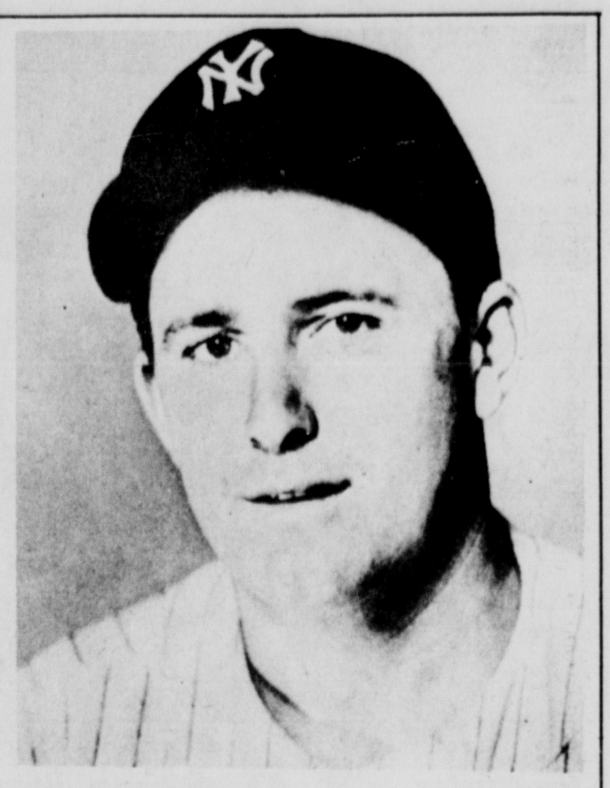
Sixto Lezcano's two-out 14th inning single brought home Don Money to end the near-four hour see-saw game. Money opened the 14th by walking on four straight pitches from loser Marty Pattin. The Brewers took a 3-2 lead in the 11th only to blow it when Kansas City tied the score in the bottom of the inning on a triple by John Mayberry and a single by Hal McRae.

Rangers 16, Tigers 6

Bill Fahey's two-run single and Lenny Randle's two-run double highlighted a seven-run fifth inning off three Detroit pitchers to back the eight-hit pitching of Nelson Briles (5-2). The Rangers batted around in the fifth as well as seventh but the only two home runs of the game came by Tigers, Ben Oglivie (5) and Jason Thompson (3).

SPORTS TODAY





Piniella, Shea at Dietz Stadium

New York Yankee outfielder Lou Piniella (L) and former Yankee pitcher Spec Shea will be at Dietz Stadium tonight at 6 p.m. for a clinic prior to Kingston Braves' Hudson Valley Rookie League homer pener against New Windsor. Story on page 12.

Sutton Is an Unhappy Dodger

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Don Sutton, who threw a temper tantrum after his third loss in a row Tuesday night and then failed to show up at Dodger Stadium Wednesday night, is unhappy but he won't say why.

"I have a lot of things eating at me," he disclosed following a 10-3 Los Angeles Dodgers' romp over the New York Mets Sunday. "As hard as I try, I can't blot them out of my mind.

"But I've decided I have to try to shut out everything else when I go on the field and just concentrate on getting the hitters out. I'm not going to tell any one what the other things are. My personal life is my personal life and it's nobody's business but my own unless it affects my performance.

"There are a lot of things that I'm not at liberty to discuss. Apparently nothing can be done about them. I'm glad I have a good friend like Larue Harcourt. He can try to iron out my problems."

Harcourt is Sutton's agent but the 31-year-old righthander declined to reveal if his problems were contractural. During the offseason, the Dodgers attempted to trade him to the New York Mets but he rejected it, having that right as a player with 10 years of major league service, the last five with the same club. The Dodgers sought Tom Seaver and Jon Matlack.

Sutton compiled a 16-13 record last season and was critical of the way he was handled by his manager, Walter Alston.

After a 6-0 loss to the San Francisco Giants Tuesday night in a game in which he went all the way, he shattered a mirror and a chair in the Dodger dressing room. He called the Dodger front office the next night and said he was staying home with his family. The Dodgers said he would not be fined.

"I have no regrets about turning down the trade," Sutton told reporters. "But I'm disappointed at the chain of reactions that occurred after the Seaver trade fell out. A lot of unusual things have happened. I don't think I could correct them by talking about them with you."

Now 5-6, Sutton added, "If I make a change, I want it to be to the other league. It's nothing personal but that's the way I feel."

The Dodgers, who had lost nine out of 13, salvaged the finale of a three-game series with a 15-hit attack after being stopped by Seaver and Matlack on Friday and Saturday nights. Dave Kingman, who drove in nine runs with four home runs, was held hitless.

The Dodgers open a four-game series with the National League East-leading Philadelphia Phillies tonight. Rick Rhoden, 4-0, will go for Los Angeles against Ron Reed, 4-1.

The Philadelphia Phillies may have the "steal of the year" in pitcher Jim Kaat.

The Phillies' National League rivals all recognized the potential of Philadelphia power and defense before the start of the season but agreed that their pitching was suspect.

Now Philadelphia pitching is looking stronger and stronger almost every day — and one reason is the 37-year-old Kaat, winner of 239 major league games who they acquired from the Chicago White Sox during the winter for infielder Alan Bannister and pitchers Dick Ruthven and Roy Thomas.

Kaat got off to a faltering start in the National League but won his second straight game and raised his record to 4-2 Sunday when he went the distance to give the Phillies a 9-3 triumph over the San Francisco Giants. What's more, Kaat is discovering that it's more fun to play in the NL where there is no designated hitter rule.

In the NL, pitchers can hit as well as pitch — and Kaat is an excellent hitter. He went 3-for-4 and knocked in three runs Sunday and in his last two games has four hits, including a homer and two doubles, in seven at bats.

"How you win is not important," commented Kaat Sunday while gloating about his hitting. "I got key outs. Giving up nine hits is no crime, not for me anyway, because I'm never going to overpower anyone."

Kaat contributed a two-run single in the seventh and a run-scoring double in the eighth as the Phillies dealt John Montefusco his fifth loss against six victories and restored their NL Eastern Division lead to 6 1-2 games. Gary Thomasson had three hits for the Giants.

The San Diego Padres defeated the Pittsburgh Pirates 6-1, the Cincinnati Reds routed the St. Louis Cardinals 13-2, — the Atlanta Braves beat the Montreal expos 14-8, and the Houston Astros scored 2-0 and 5-1 victories over the Chicago Cubs in other NL games.

Padres 6, Pirates 1

Enzo Hernandez and Ted Kubiak each drove in two runs and Brent Strom pitched a seven-hitter for his sixth win for the Padres, who dealt the Pirates' John Candelaria his fourth setback. A "Jacket Day" promotion helped the Pirates set a home crowd record of 51,726. Hernandez and Dave Winfield had three hits each for San Diego.

Reds 13, Cards 2

Bill Plummer, filling in for the injured Johnny Bench, drove in seven runs with a homer, triple and single as the Reds buried the Cardinals with a 17-hit attack. Pat Zachry allowed four hits in seven innings to raise his record to 5-1 while Pete Falcone suffered his fifth loss against three victories for the Cardinals.

Braves 14, Expos 8

Rowland Office drove in four runs, three with a homer, and stretched his hitting streak to 12 games, in Atlanta's victory that swept a three-game set with the Expos. Office had four hits and Tom Paciorek three for the Braves while Jack White had three for the Expos.

Astros 2-5, Cubs 0-1

Joacquin Andujar pitched a two-hitter in the first game and Gilbert Rondon went 6 1-3 innings for the victory in the second game in the Astros' sweep of the Cubs. Bob Watsn's run-scoring single and Roger Metzger's sacrifice fly accounted for Houston's runs in the first game while Cesar Cedeno and Jerry DaVanon had two hits each in the second game.

Pat Kept Her Mind on Game

NEW ROCHELLE (UPI) — A lack of concentration on the golf course can sometimes be disastrous, but in Pat Bradley's case, inattention was exactly what she needed.

"The last time I was in a playoff, I lost to (Sandra) Haynie, and I was awed by the name," Bradley said Sunday after winning the $76,000 Girl Talk Classic.

"This time I didn't pay attention to (Judy) Rankin's name."

Bradley, in fact, didn't even watch Rankin, the leading money winner on the LPGA tour this year, while Rankin was putting on the second hole of a sudden death playoff.

"I just listened to hear if it went in," she said. "I felt if I saw her stroke it and miss it that would be the last picture in my mind, so I didn't watch it. That kind of thing has affected me before."

Rankin did miss, three-putting the second extra hole for a bogey. Bradley made her own putt, a four-footer for par, to win the $14,000 top prize.

It started as a four-way playoff with Sandra Post and Bonnie Lauer also involved following a tie at 217, one over par for 54 holes, but Post and Lauer were eliminated when Bradley and Rankin birdied the first extra hole.

The three-putt green gave Rankin her fifth successive playoff loss including three in a four-week stretch last spring, but it was no stranger than some of the miseries that befell some other top players.

Consider:

Betty Burfeindt, the LPGA champion, needed four shots to get out of a bunker at the second hole, and eventually finished three shots behind. Sandra Palmer, the Women's Open champ, blew a three-stroke lead with a bogey-bogey-par-double bogey stretch and skied to 79, her highest score of the year. And Laura Baugh's hopes for her first victory ended when she three-putted the final green from 12 feet for a bogey. She was one shot out of the playoff.

And of course there was Bradley herself, making bogeys at the 17th (a topped drive) and 18th holes (a hooked drive into an unplayable lie) to blow a two-stroke lead and force the playoff.

"I was a little shaken coming in on 18," she admitted. "I think now I should have taken a 3-wood and just played for position."

Bradley, who shot 72-73-72, said "I guess I was gripping the club a little tight" at that point.

It's understandable.

In the year's first tournament, at Miami, she also thought she had a victory, leading Rankin by two shots with three holes to go. Then Bradley hit her next drive in the water, Rankin made birdie, and Rankin won.

Despite the loss, Rankin—who birdied three of the last eight holes down the stretch— received $5,933 that raised her earnings this year to $72,775 and kept her goal of the LPGA's first 100-grand year in sight.

"It's a good payday,z she said, without the slightest trace of a smile. "But $9,000 (the difference between the playoff winner and losers was actually a little over $8,000) three-putts aren't something you throw a party about."

For Bradley, 25 and a third-year pro, her first U.S. victory raised her earnings for the year to $33,035.

Baugh, the first round leader on a 66, finished with two straight 76s for her 218 total. JoAnn Washam was at 72-219, Burfeindt and Joyce Kazmierski at 220, Palmer and JoAnne Carner at 221.

Tom Kite reacts to birdie putt

It Took Momentum to Get Tom Kite Going

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — It takes a little momentum to get a kite going and one named Tom is no exception.

Aided by some verbal shoves from a few of his fellow golfers, 26-year-old Tom Kite won the first pro golf tournament in his four-year career Sunday by defeating Terry Diehl in the fifth hole of a sudden death playoff at the Bicentennial Golf Classic.

Kite shot a five-under-par 66 and Diehl had a 68 to tie at 277, seven under par after regulation and forced the sudden death which Kite won when he parred the fifth extra hole and Diehl bogeyed.

The end came on the 15th hole where the playoff started with a bogey by each and returned there when both Kite and Diehl matched par on the 16th, 17th and 18th that were used for the other extra holes.

Diehl, also 26, drove into the rough, something he had done the first time, and Kite hit the fairway. After Diehl put his second shot in the rough left of the green, Kite hit the green. He two putted from about 12 feet after Diehl's shot out of the rough went 25 feet by the pin.

Kite said he was thinking when Diehl drove into the rough for the second straight time on that playoff hole: "You give me another chance and I'm not going to miss this one."

The victory was worth $40,000 to Kite, while Diehl got $22,800. Jerry Pate was third with a 278 total and Ray Floyd, Larry Nelson and Jerry McGee were tied for fourth at 269.

In back of them, at 280, was Grier Jones and Ken Still, while Bob Gilder was alone at 281.

Kite started the day's play at the Whitemarsh Valley Country Club in fourth place and three strokes back of five players who were tied for the third round lead.

"A couple of people came up to me before the round and told me I could win this," Kite said. "But three strokes off and ten guys in front of me, I wasn't thinking that much about it."

Kite said he was "dogging it down the third hole" after two routine pars and Roger Maltbie, winner of a sudden death a week ago, was going down an adjacent fairway and yelled over, "go get 'em, Tom, you can win this one easy."

Kite promptly birdied that third hole by chipping in off the green from 40 yards out and "everything really started rolling."

Kite, an early finisher, had a lead, but waited while several others out on the course threatened to move ahead of him.

Pate, and Nelson did climb to eight under with birdies on the 16th hole. But both bogied the 17th and missed a chance to be in the playoffs when Pate bogeyed the 18th and Nelson had a double bogey.

Diehl, playing ahead of Pate and Nelson and on the 18th green at seven under, had a chance to win the tournament if he made a 12-foot uphill put that would have given him a birdie. The puck slid past to the right of the hole.

Diehl had another opportunity to win on the first playoff hole, the 15th, when Kite was threatened with a double bogey. But slammed in a tricky six foot puck from the fringe to match Diehl's bogey.

"I thought I had Tom there," Diehl said. But Kite said: "It was really one of those days when everything went right."

Four U.S. Netmen In Bid for Title

PARIS (UPI) — Wojtek Fibak, riding an incredible string of upsets in recent months, Monday stood between American Eddie Dibbs and a quarter-final berth as the seeds at the $210,000 French Open Tennis Championships clashed for the first time.

Dibbs, the No. 5 seed, was scheduled to meet the ninth seeded Fibak in the first of four matches over the next two days as four American seeded players try to clinch places in the final eight — an unprecedented show of strength by U.S. players at the world's top clay court tournament.

The play of Fibak has put Poland on the tennis map. In a span of two months recently, he beat Guillermo Vilas to win the Swedish Open, Bjorn Borg in the Monaco Open and Manuel Orantes to carry off the British hard-court title in Bournemouth. Also, he teamed with West German Karl Meiler in Kansas City to win the WCT doubles title.

Fibak's success has turned Poland into a tennis-conscious nation. It had never before produced a world class player but now, as Fibak says, "everyone knows the names of the big players, how they play and how they look."

Fibak did not burst onto the tennis circuit overnight. A 23-year-old law student from Poznan, he first played at Wimbledon as a junior five years ago.

"At Wimbledon, tennis was so big, so nice. Everyone was interested in it. There were so many thinks about it that we never realized in Poland," said Fibak, who can speak English, German, French, Czech and Russian.

But the five years of circuit tennis paid off this winter when he made the huge leap from being just another tournament player to being a winner. "Now everyone in Poland is proud of me," he said simply.

Dibbs, who saiid he has "a good shot at the title," had the advantge of playing on the slow clay court on which his baseline game flourishes.

Baseball Clinic at Dietz Stadium

Piniella, Shea Here Tonight

KINGSTON—New York Yankee outfielder Lou Piniella and former Yankee hurler Spec Shea will be the featured attractions tonight at Dietz Stadium in a baseball clinic that will precede the home opener of the Kingston Braves of the Hudson Valley Rookie League.

The clinic starts at 6 p.m., and the game between the Braves and the New Windsor Rockets will start at 8 p.m.

Area Little Leagues and Babe Ruth Leagues will be represented at the clinic. The Kingston Patrolmen's Association is sponsoring the admissions of the Jaycee, American and National Little Leagues along with the Kingston Babe Ruth League; the Saugerties Babe Ruth League will be sponsored by the Sawyer Ambulance Service.

The Saugerties Little League is being sponsored by the Heritage Restaurant, Roy Helsmoortel Insurance, Kaye Sports, Buono Funeral Home, Jack Keeley of Keeley's Korner and Jim Gage of Sports Huddle.

The Braves, a perennial bridesmaid in the HVRL's Northern Division, will seek their second win of the year against the Southern Division contender Rockets. Kingston opened its campaign with a 5-4 win in New Paltz Saturday.

Braves manager Jerry Hawkins has a fine array of talent at his disposal this year. Bob Marz, Larry Panella and Tom Whitaker, all sluggers from the New Paltz State camp, are joined by such standouts as Rich Koegel of Penn State and Charlie Ma zzola of Ulster County Community College. On the pitching staff are Kevin Coughlin of Jacksonville University, Saugerties High School star Tim Cole and veteran Tom Gallo.

Kingston is expected to battle to the wire once again for divisional honors with the defending champion Poughkeepsie Lasers. The Marlboro Jets, the New Paltz Falcons and the Wappingers Ions comprise the rest of the Northern Division.

In the Southern Division, the powerhouse Newburgh Atoms will defend against New Windsor, the Monroe-Woodbury Crusaders, the Newburgh Nuclears and the Pine Bush Stars.

Hawks or Blues For Bobby Orr

BOSTON (UPI) — The saga of former Boston Bruin star Bobby Orr may be settled this week once and for all.

Admitting he is "damaged goods," Orr said Sunday he will sign this week with either the Chicago Black Hawks or St. Louis Blues.

He made the prediction in an interview from Toronto with reporter Russ Conway of Lawrence Sunday, a subsidiary of the Lawrence, Mass., Eagle Tribune.

Orr, who became a free agent last week, said he regretted leaving Boston after 10 years, but added, "it looks like I'll be headed to the Chicago Black Hawks or St. Louis Blues.

"My lawyer, Alan Eagleson, is going to meet with these two teams in Montreal and I have told him I want it cleaned up this week."

A Black Hawks spokesman said club President William Wirtz and General Manager Tommy Ivan talked at length with Eagleson in Bermuda last Thursday and planned to meet with him again Tuesday in Montreal during the annual National Hockey League meetings.

However, both Wirtz and Ivan were scheduled to fly to Montreal late Sunday and would be available for a meeting with Eagleson today.

Orr said since becoming a free agent last week that the Boston club had made stipulations in its last offer of $350,000 per year over the next five years.

"...I would not have received one cent if I went to training camp next September and was unable to pass a medical (examination) which would prove to the Bruins that I could score 120 points.

NOTICE OF PROPOSED CHANGES IN TELEPHONE COMPANY SCHEDULES

Notice is hereby given that tariff revisions have been filed, effective July 1, 1976, providing for changes in the regulations concerning the liability of the Telephone Company for service interruptions. The tariff language and modified provisions as set forth in the proposed revisions are designed to reflect the Company's actual practices in its dealings with subscribers.

Liability of Telephone Company for Service Interruptions, Errors, etc.

Two proposed changes relating to subsequent service interruptions are as follows:

For any subsequent interruption during the same billing period, an allowance of 2/30 of the Tariff monthly rate for all services and facilities furnished by the Company rendered useless or substantially impaired shall apply for each 24 hours or fraction thereof during which the interruption continues after notice to the Company by the subscriber, provided, however, that the subsequent service interruption was for a period of at least 24 hours.

If service is interrupted for a period of less than 24 hours, following notice by the subscriber to the Company, and there was a previous interruption of at least 24 hours in the same billing period, an allowance of 2/30 of the Tariff monthly rate for all services and facilities furnished by the Company rendered useless or substantially impaired shall apply for each day in which one or more such interruptions occurred, if such allowance is requested of the business office by the subscriber on the grounds that his service for such day was substantially impaired by such interruption or interruptions.

The proposed revisions also provide that:

When all central office lines terminating in a key system or PBX system are interrupted, credit will be given for the equipment in the same manner as for the lines; however, when some but not all of the lines are interrupted, credit will be given for the lines affected but no credit will be given for the equipment except on customer request and the amount of the credit will be negotiated by the Business Office.

The allowance for an outage in supplemental equipment, when the central office lines are not affected shall be 1/30th of the tariff charge for each day the equipment is out of service; this credit shall be given for interruptions of less than 24 hours, however, only when requested by the customer.

NEW YORK TELEPHONE COMPANY

NOTICE OF PROPOSED CHANGES IN TELEPHONE RATE SCHEDULES

Notice is hereby given that the following tariff amendments providing for the introduction of the new COM KEY*416 Service have been filed with the Public Service Commission to be effective June 30, 1976.

DESCRIPTION OF SERVICE

The COM KEY 416 Service is a key telephone system with a capacity of 4 lines, 16 telephone instruments and 2 intercommunication paths. All instruments are multi-button telephones, in ivory with a choice of 9 decorator color faceplates, each equipped to pick up all the lines terminating in the system. The lines appear in the same sequence at each station. Two types of telephone sets, Common Equipment Stations and Basic Stations are used. All stations are equipped to pick up all the lines terminating in the system. Each Common Equipment Station also contains the control circuitry for the system features and for a maximum of 2 central office lines, one intercommunication path and 7 Basic Stations. The use of two Common Equipment Stations provides the ultimate system capacity.

The basic features of the service are pick-up, wink hold illumination, multi-line conferencing, button restoration, flexible ringing, recall, direct station selection on intercommunication paths, tone ringing, one-way voice signaling on intercommunication paths and built-in loudspeaker. Optional features, as described in the tariff, also are available at additional charges.

RATE STRUCTURE

COM KEY 416 Service is offered under three rate options, designated Options 1, 2 and 3. Under Option 1, the service is offered on the basis of standard monthly rates and installation charges, which are subject to change. Under Options 2 and 3, the monthly rates for the service and facilities consist of two parts, "A" and "B." The subscriber has the option of selecting "A" rate payment periods of 36, 60 or 84 months. The selected "A" rates are guaranteed against Company-initiated change. The "B" part of the monthly rates apply, subject to change, from the date of installation. Under Option 2, the subscriber elects to pay an installation charge and under Option 3, the subscriber pays no separate installation charge, but the monthly rates for Option 3 service are higher than the monthly rates for Option 2 service. Termination charges specified in the Tariff apply to the service and facilities furnished under Options 2 and 3. As an alternative to paying the "A" portion of the charge over the selected payment periods, the subscriber may elect to make a one-time payment.

RATES AND CHARGES

The rates and charges are set forth in tariffs which are available for inspection at any office of the Telephone Company where business is transacted in person. The location of these offices can be found in the first pages of telephone directories.

Tariffs are also available at the offices of the Public Service Commission. A list of the rates and charges will also be furnished to any person who requests it by writing to the following address:

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

TUESDAY, JUNE 8

Your birthday today: This year offers a clean break from past limitations. It is up to you how you use available opportunities. Express yourself clearly without raising controversy over irrelevant issues. During the stress of transition, relationships either become set or lapse. Today's natives are firmly committed once they make a promise.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Before going ahead with a sound idea, you must know costs and relevant facts. Confront and compete with rivals. Get verification before you act.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): People who've remained quiet for a long time make sudden changes now. Your projects gain from temporary delays: rethink a few details.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Your work reaches a critical point where you must be accurate and honest. You can make a constructive move or let the temporary stress upset an old arrangement.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Money gets out of hand if you mix in matters that are none of your business or answer a plea for help. Relate incidents entertainingly.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Hold on! Direct your responses only at those who ask for them. Despite an abrupt change of mind, don't switch things around at the last minute.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): People are a bit edgy, and pass the mood along in thoughtless words and actions. Skip the shoptalk, listen attentively and save yourself emotional tension.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You're of great service rescuing something important for someone you care about. Expect no gratitude; accept no thanks. Leave cash reserves untouched.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Make sure of places, times and details before losing contact with your informant. Personal matters conflict with employment; a balance is hard to manage.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Stand aside if drastic moves are launched. Old problems remain because people are obstinate. High authority, institutions are no help.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Friends say you're too organized; you see them as inconsistent. Truth is in between, but a compromise is unlikely. Mutual acceptance is the key.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Don't be provoked—look after your interests. Improve health with jogging, lunch-hour walks or gardening. Offer emotional support to those in distress.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Stop feeling sorry for yourself; be thankful things go as well as they do. By helping others pick up the pieces, you learn something useful.

Jean Adams TEEN FORUM

By Jean Adams, Phd.

SLOPPY: My sister is sloppy. She throws her clothes on her chair. I tell her to clean it up, and she does. But the next day the chair is full of clothes again.

What can I do? — Sick of it in Pennayivania.

(A.) Some people are natural pilers. Every time they clean up an old pile of litter they make a new pile somewhere else.

You have the right solution. Clean up the pile or piles every day — or oftener.

But I am not sure your "telling" your sister again and again what to do is the best way to get her to improve. Maybe you can persuade your mother and father to give her some orders and see that she follows them.

That is THEIR job, you know.

Then, when she carries out their orders, you can compliment her on how nice her room (or maybe her part of the room you two share) looks. By complimenting her you will encourage her to make things look even nicer.

That is being positive. Being positive gets the results you want and makes people like you too.

ONE GIRL, TWO BOYS: (Q.) I need advice in a hurry. I have been trying for a month to go out with this girl Sandy, I like her. But my best friend, who knows that I like her, asked her out and she said yes.

Do you think I should still try to go out with her? And what do you think of this so-called friend of mine? — Upset in Connecticut.

(A.) He must have good taste. Sandy is a likable girl. You like her. You should not condemn another boy for liking her.

Yes, ask her out, if you haven't already done so. And if you have, ask her again.

If she prefers you, she will no doubt let your friend know in due time. If she prefers him, she will probably let you know.

But until she makes a choice, the field is open for both of you.

By Oswald & James Jacoby

Oswald: "Starting in 1975, New York's Cavendish Club runs an invitation tournament for the benefit of the Children's cancer fund. Jim Jacoby won it last year with Jeff Westheimer. This year it was won by Allen Sontag and Peter Weischsel, one of the best young pairs today."

Jim: "I was unable to play this year, but judging by the way Peter and Allen played, I doubt very much if we could have repeated."

Oswald: "Allen and Peter gained a lot of points when an opponent's attempt to fix them backfired. East's one notrump was pure whimsy and gave Peter a chance to bid two hearts. Allen tried a three-club cue bid. Peter jumped to four hearts and Allen bid six."

Jim: "There wasn't any real problem in the play. Peter drew trumps and attacked spades by cashing dummy's ace and his own queen. When East showed out (obviously East's notrump had been pure whimsy), Peter was able to finesse against West's jack. He had to lose a club at the end, but he could afford it."

Report At Least Six Dead As 310-Foot Dam Bursts

IDAHO FALLS, Idaho (UPI) — No one paid much attention when water began seeping through the 310-foot Teton Dam. But then a whirlpool appeared ominously near one corner and the earth-fill dam burst, sending millions of gallons of water racing through the Upper Snake River Valley.

Daryl Grieg was fishing Saturday when he looked up to see a "giant wave that looked like it was 30 feet high" rushing at him. Grieg, 22, rode a logjam in the flooded Teton River until he climbed to safety in a tree.

By the time the water level over 300 flooded square miles dropped Sunday, at least six persons were reported dead because of the disaster and numerous others were listed as missing.

About 7,000 homes were ruined in the rush of water, mud and debris, some 30,000 persons were evacuated, and thousands of head of cattle were drowned.

Those who could returned to mud-filled homes and farms today to find other danges awaiting them — pesticide-poisoned water, rattlesnakes and diseases caused by the decaying cattle.

President Ford declared the valley a disaster area, making federal recovery funds available.

Officials said two of the dead were fishermen who had been below the dam when it ruptured Saturday. Another was a 62-year-old woman who suffered a fatal heart attack.

Civil Defense operations officer Kent Marlor said the exact death count may never be known. "We're not going to get all the bodies," he said in Rexburg, the town hardest hit by the flood.

"They're gone. They are buried under the mud."

Officials said most of the missing probably had taken refugee at other homes and locations.

Two federal officials said Sunday night a preliminary investigation disclosed a corner of the dam began crumbling because water seeped through three grout curtains between the fill and the rock bottom of the Teton River, but that initially the seepage had attracted little attention.

Then a whirlpool appeared near the corner just before the break, Commissioner Gilbert Stamm of the Bureau of Reclamation and assistant Interior Secretary Jack Horton told an Idaho Falls Airport news conference.

But, they said, valley residents had been given a warning in ample time.

Stamm and Horton denied a report a "ground shift" caused the break.

Getty Hated 'Richest' Tag

LONDON (UPI) — Billionaire J. Paul Getty, who died Sunday at 83, always disliked being called one the world's richest men — not out of sensitivity, but because he felt it classified him as "some sort of freak."

The Minneapolis-born attorney's son, who made his first million by the age of 24, died one minute after midnight, succumbing to a heart attack at his mansion, Sutton Place. He had been in failing health for some time.

Noel Bramblett, Getty's long-time assistant, said the oil magnate's body would be flown to California — where Getty grew up — for burial.

Getty left his family with assets reportedly worth between $10 billion and $20 billion, but he could never get used to being tagged one of the world's richest men.

"It sounds like you are some sort of freak — the world's tallest man, the heaviest man, the wisest man, the most foolish man, the world's shortest midget," he told a recent interviewer.

He said he preferred to be remembered as a man of many talents — businessman, linguist, art connoisseur, health fanatic.

He said more than once he did not feel guilty about his wealth, but stories about his alleged frugality were legion: how he worked from an inexpensive two-room apartment, how he locked the telephones at his Surrey mansion, how he charged a film company photographing his dogs.

In his recent autobiography he said he intended to donate the bulk of his oil fortune to charitable foundations.

But he also indicated he would provide for his three sons and 15 grandchildren — one of whom, J. Paul Getty III, was kidnaped in Italy three years ago and ransomed for $1.5 million by his grandfather only after the abductors cut off one of young Getty's ears.

Getty said he initially refused to pay the ransom, not out of stinginess but because "I would automatically be placing all others (of his grandchildren) in jeopardy."

The kidnaping was one of the tragedies that wealth brought, but there were others.

Five marriages ended in divorce. His favorite son, George, died of an overdose of barbiturates in 1973.

Residents who live near the 1,000-acre mansion where the billionaire died recalled Getty not as a temperamental recluse but as a man given to generosity.

Eddie Moor, landlord of a local pub, told how Getty would invite groups of orphan children to Christmas parties and others told of the times Getty opened Sutton Place grounds for charity fetes.

"That is not the picture of a mean man," Moor said.

Hays Decision Later This Week

BARTON, Ohio (UPI) — Rep. Wayne Hays, D-Ohio, indicated Sunday he may decide this week whether to step down temporarily as chairman of the House Administration Committee.

During a Polish-American picnic and volunteer firemen's chicken barbecue, Hays told UPI he would not comment on his involvement in a sex scandal concerning a woman employe, Elizabeth Ray.

Asked if reports he would resign from the committee after the primary elections were true, Hays said:

"We're under a court order not to discuss this — both sides. But we'll discuss it next week and if I do it (resign) it will only be temporarily. But that's all I can say because we have agreed not to discuss it."

Hays said he attended the picnic and barbecue at the last minute because he "heard about them on the radio." His appearance at the picnic attended by about 30 persons lasted less than two minutes.

He lingered at the barbecue for nearly two hours waiting in vain for a scheduled appearance by the wife of Democratic presidential aspirant Jimmy Carter.

Hays was surrounded by well-wishers at the barbecue.

"This man's the greatest," said John Lippian, 66, of Mannard, Ohio. "My son was wounded in Vietnam and we didn't hear from him for months. But my wife and I went to Wayne's office in St. Clairsville, and in 28 minutes Mrs. Hays called the Okinawa Hospital, found my son and we talked to him."

Hays was accompanied by his new wife, Patricia, who said she was "really proud of him. I think he's fantastic."

The congressman accused the "Eastern news media" of "overstating" factors involved in the Elizabeth Ray scandal "in an effort to demean me."

Hays said he was aware a high percentage of his constituents were supporting him, except for "one guy in Flushing (Hays' hometown) who is spreading poison."

"But I prosecuted him during the war for mixing butter and oleo," Hays added.

One of his most vocal supporters grabbed the arm of a UPI newsman, demanded to know what was going to be printed, and said, "Wayne Hays is the greatest congressman alive today and I don't give a damn what anybody else says.

"When we're in trouble or need help, Mr. Hays is always there. Now print that."

Year Later, Carey Names Four To Review Council

ALBANY (UPI) — A year after the positions were created in answer to public outrage about conditions at local jails and lockups, Gov. Hugh Carey today named four persons to the Citizen's Policy and Complaint Review Council.

The council is an adjunct to the Correction Commission, the prison watchdog agency which was overhauled by the 1975 legislature after extensive public hearings documented the failure of the old commission to adequately monitor conditions in county jails.

Only last month did the Senate finally confirm two of Carey's appointments to the three-member, salaried commission. A third, Herman Schwartz, a controversial Buffalo attorney, was rejected after a lengthy and rancorous hearing process.

An administration spokesman admitted that the delay in filling the council positions was due in large part to the difficulty experienced with the Schwartz nomination.

The seven-member council was intended to act on citizen complaints about conditions at local lockups and advise the commission of the required course of action. The spokesman said three more appointments would be made "in the near future."

Bella Sees $$ Reform

BINGHAMTON (UPI) — Rep. Bella Abzug, D-N.Y., a candidate for the state's Democratic senatorial nomination, says the federal welfare system of reimbursements should be reformed.

Mrs. Abzug, campaigning upstate Saturday, said the federal government should be required to pay localities 75 per cent of the cost of welfare programs instead of reimbursing the state 50 per cent, as is now done.

The Manhattan congresswoman also said statistics belie statements from Republicans, including President Ford, that the economy is improving.

Mrs. Abzug later planned stops in Auburn, Geneseo, Geneva, Olean and Seneca Falls.

She hopes to get the Democratic nomination to unseat Sen. James Buckley, the Conservative-Republican incumbent who also faces an inparty challenge from Rep. Peter Peyser, R-N.Y.

Traver Hollow Bridge

Traver Hollow Bridge Burning Attempted

WEST SHOKAN — Someone with a penchant for direct action tried to burn down the Traver Hollow Bridge Saturday night, a year to the day after it was closed by the New York City Board of Water Supply for repairs.

Only minor damage was done to the bridge thanks to the volunteer efforts of two Town of Olive constables who staked it out after overhearing a conversation in a local tavern that indicated an attempt might be made to burn it down.

Constables Lloyd Humphrey and William Kassor concealed themselves near the bridge after dark and at 10:20 p.m. investigated a suspicious sound. They found a gasoline-soaked tire and other debris piled along the base of wooden scaffolding being used by workmen repairing the bridge. A radio call brought the Olivebridge, West Shokan, Shokan and Boiceville fire companies to the scene and the fire was put out without incident.

Firemen en route to the fire noticed a car speeding away from the West Shokan end of the bridge and marked down the license number. Olive constables and Board of Water Supply police later arrested four suspects but released them for lack of evidence. Names of the suspects were not revealed.

The bridge, on Route 28-A between West Shokan and Boiceville, has been a source of contention since it was closed last year as unsafe. In addition to disrupting traffic to and from the western part of the Town of Olive, its closing has caused serious problems for fire companies, the Olive First Aid Squad, and other agencies furnishing services in which speed is a vital factor. An ambulance ride from West Shokan to Boiceville, which normally takes five minutes, now takes 45.

Dr. John Keough, business administrator of the Onteora Central School District, said that the detour had added $22,000 to the district's busing contracts for the 1976-77 school year.

Local officials, aided by Assemblyman Maurice D. Hinchey, D-101st Dist., are trying to persuade the city to at least build a detour across city-owned land that would improve on the present 14-mile detour. Hinchey said the increased cost of school busing alone would justify such an expenditure and said he would introduce legislation to keep New York City from closing bridges and roads it owns upstate without state permission.

New York City says it is willing to spend the estimated $1.3 million needed to build a new bridge over Traver Hollow but says it might takes a take as long as three years to complete.

The bridge was first closed for repairs after a safety inspection, but later inspections revealed serious structural damage and city officials announced that it would be cheaper to build a new bridge than to attempt to bring the old one up to standards.

Olive Councilman Robert Adsit, chairman of the constables' committee, commended Humphrey and Kassor for their off-duty and out-of -uniform work at the bridge.

UCCC's Graduates Told to Recall Past

STONE RIDGE — The graduating class of Ulster County Community College was urged to recognized the ties between past and present Sunday by Robert T. Brown, president, and Herbert H. Cutler, president of the Ulster County Historical Society, at the school's twelfth commencement Sunday.

Brown, referring to the historical sites near the campus and the important revolutionary era events which took place in the Kingston area, said, "This all demonstrates our sense of history."

"This continuity," Brown added, "is something that we hope will always continue and is something you should be ever mindful of."

Tracing the history of education in the Hudson Valley from the earliest Dutch settlements, Herbert Cutler noted that the first Dutch schoolmaster in the area arrived in 1633.

Despite his assignment to "set a moral standard for the edification of youth,", Cutler said, schoolmaster Adam Roelansten "was an early and successful apostle of graft on Manhattan Island."

"The first schoolmaster in Esopus," Cutler said, "came to the area before the buidling of the stockade, for his house in the Ponchockie section was burned in 1658."

"As early as 1769 there were designs for opening an academy in Kingston," he noted. "The Kingston Academy opened in May 1774 and appears to have met with very great success from the commencement."

Efforts to establish a college in the Ulster County area date back to 1779, Cutler said.

" Less than two years after Kingston had been reduced to ashes by the British, the trustees of the Town attempted to obtain a college charter in Kingston."

A later attempt in 1804 failed "partly because a large part of the subscription fund was in Ulster and Delaware Turnpike stock of questionable value," Culter said.

Mrs. George F. Bushnell, chairman of the college board of trustees termed last year "one of the most successful" in the history of the college. She noted the school has been reaccredited by the Middle States Association for up to 10 years.

Mrs. Bushnell yesterday conferred the position of Professor Emeritus on Dr. Erna Moss, a faculty member for the last thirteen years. Dr. Moss, formerly head of the Department of Foreign Languages, was designated Professor Emeritus by the Board of Trustees.

Union Head Claims Troopers Restricted

ALBANY (UPI) — The public "is being lulled into a false sense of security" by being told that restrictions on state police patrol cars have been lifted and that highway .patrol units have been beefed up, according to the president of the union representing state troopers.

In fact, Patrick Carroll said this weekend, troopers are still under strict orders to shut off their motors at least 15 minutes hourly and restrict gasoline usage wherever possible.

In addition, the special speed control units assigned to certain interstate highways "are for traffic control only. The patrols will not leave the interstate highways for any reason," Carroll said

Ulster County Sheriff Thomas Mayone, commenting on the situation today, questioned the delay in restoring the budget cuts affecting the New York State Police: "With crime sweeping up from the metropolitan areas into the Hudson Valley at an alarming rate, this unconscionable move in cutting the funding for the New York State Police must be reversed immediately. This is not the time to decrease our crime-fighting capability in Ulster County."

Carroll, head of the 3,200-member Police Benevolent Association representing troopers, said that the announcement by police officials that the mileage restrictions had been lifted was misleading.

Troopers had been told to reduce patrol mileage by 28 per cent following a $1.1 million cut in the State Police budget by Gov. Hugh Carey and a further reduction of $946,000 ordered by the legislature.

Carroll also said that a continued freeze on hiring new troopers would put police strength by the end of the year at "several hundred" below levels at the beginning of 1975 and "at least 1,000 below trooper strength recommended" by a November 1974 report by the State Division of the Budget.

"What remains is a poor patrol coverage for suburban and rural areas of the state due to budget cuts," he said.

Stakes Big in Tuesday Primaries

By UPI

With only hours to go before the windup of the long 1976 presidential primary season, all of the candidates were on the stump — rhetoric escalating, accusations flailing, promises rife.

The three states — California, Ohio and New Jersey — have close to a third of the total number of delegates needed for both the Republican and the Democratic nominations.

California is the biggest, but since it is considered all but sure to go for its Democratic governor, Jerry Brown, and its Republican ex-governor, Ronald Reagan, most of the excitement was elsewhere.

Ohio is crucial for President Ford, who must win both it and New Jersey with a big enough delegate pickup to offset Reagan's expected win of the big delegate block in California.

Ford flew to Ohio from New Jersey Sunday and scheduled a 288-mile motorcade today, insisting his television ads — which hit at Reagan's foreign policy positions — are justified by the challenger's own words.

Referring to Reagan's statements concerning the use of American troops to keep the peace in Rhodesia, Ford's commercial said: "Governor Reagan could not start a war. President Reagan could "

The Reagan camp called it unfair and underhanded. But there was no indication it would be withdrawn.

Reagan returned to California Sunday for a final day of blitzing his home state.

Ohio could be just as crucial for the Democratic candidates A big Jimmy Carter win there, it is generally conceded, would all but cinch the nomination for the former Georgia governor

But a loss either to Morris Udall — it would be his first win — or to Frank Church, who entered late but has campaigned hard, would be a severe blow to his stretch drive and might bring him yet another opponent: Hubert Humphrey.

Humphrey, who cinched 51 of his home state's 65 delegates Sunday, says he will "reassess" his position once the primaries are over — unless Carter wins Ohio with enough delegates to put him within reach of the prize.

Udall said Tuesday is "judgment day," and told a crowd in Parma, Ohio "if Jimmy Carter wins big here in Ohio, it's all over — you know who your nominee is going to be."

Carter seeks to overcome Jewish voters' misgivings about him with a strong stand on Israel's future. In a speech Sunday he pledged an "absolute" commitment to Israel's security.

Stockade Area Is Still in Limbo

KINGSTON — The question of whether an eightblock area of uptown Kingston is legally a "Stockade Area," remains unresolved today as the City of Kingston and Ulster County argue the moral as well as legal aspects of the historic designation.

Meanwhile members of Kingston Historic Landmarks Commission have indicated their concern that if the stockade ordinance cannot be enforced with regard to government property, it will be even more difficult to enforce it in the private sector.

Last week, County Attorney Abram Molyneaux determined that legally there is no such things as the Stockade Area because the city failed to carry out the local law it passed to create the area. Molyneaux claimed the city was neglectful in not amending its zoning map and delineating the area on the map.

The county attorney took exception to Ulster County Minority Leader Louis Klein's contention that the county's investment in the Buick property in the Stockade Area was endangered because of the area's historical designation Molyneaux countered saying there is no such thing as the Stockade Area.

One member of the Landmarks Commission, Paul Scogna found it disconcerting that " someone who understands the intent of the ordinance would override it on the basis of some legality."

Scogna feels it is an extension of the attitude of the county regarding the city with the city getting the " dirty end of the stick."

He admonished the county for doing whatever it feels like in the city and in spite of the city.

An attempt by the city to conform with the letter of the law in carrying out the stockade ordinance was made several weeks ago when Mayor Francis R. Koenig instructed Corporation Council Aaron Klein to amend the zoning ordinance. Klein maintains that a map of the area is on file and meets the requirement of the law.

Under the present cicumstances, if decisions concerning use of properties in the Stockade Area are to be argued they will probably have to be argued in the courts, according to Harry Rigby, city historian and member of the Landmarks Commission.

Rigby recalled that the city's interest in the Buick property was in wishing to keep in on the tax rolls. The county bought it and is now demolishing it with an eye toward constructing a colonial parking lot.

Concerned with the aesthetics of the area, Rigby said the commission is not as concerned with the loss of the garage as it is with the fact that another part of the Stockade is being blacktopped. As for the colonial design planned for the parking area, he chided county planners saying he doesn't remember that in colonial days we had automobiles.

He took exception to the county making laws for the city, and muddying the waters. And he sees no validity in the county's contention

At one time the Landmarks Commission looked into the possible historical value of the Buick Garage building but found only one wall was of any significance. Therefore it did not object to its demolition.

It is located adjacent to the Ulster County Office Building and fronts on Main and Pearl Streets and on Clinton Avenue

The Stockade Area is bounded by Clinton, Pearl, Main, North Front and Green streets.

The area was first designated a stockade some 300 years ago when settlers in Wiltwyck built a stockade around their tiny hamlet to protect themselves from hostile Indians

A 1974 stockade ordinance was approved by the Historic Landmarks Commission to hopefully protect the district from some modern hostiles, parking lots, neon and glass.

Finkle Aiming for Treasurer

KINGSTON — Harold E. Finkle, Kingston, appears to be the new top contender for the Republican nomination for county treasurer after C. Freeman Lasher's withdrawal from the race during the weekend

Finkle, 59, an executive with First Albany Corp., suddenly announced for the post when Lasher pulled out to avoid risking a loss of GOP strength in the legislature.

Lasher said his decision was prompted by last week's New York State Supreme Court decision that invalidated a local law, adopted last January, allowing the county legislature to fill its own vacancies. The decision restores the privilege of filling vacancies to the governor.

The ruling jeopardized Lasher's seat as well. If elected treasurer, he would have been forced to resign as legislator in Dist. 3.

Realistically, the Ulster County Republican leadership could expect Gov. Hugh Carey, a Democrat, to appoint Democrats to replace both Spada and Lasher. That would reduce the GOP majority in the County Legislature to a mere five votes (19 Republicans to 14 Democrats).

The slim edge could prove too close for comfort. A simple majority is not, by law, sufficient to enact certain legislation.

With the county Republican convention scheduled at the Walnut Grove in Kingston this Tuesday night, Republican strategists were forced to reverse the decision to back Lasher's bid for treasurer to forestall reduction of the county GOP majority.

Lasher announced during the weekend he prefers to keep his present seat. That paved the way for a new candidate .

Finkle, an investment executive with the First Albany Corp., has been in investment management for 30 years and is familiar with the fiscal operations of the New York and American stock exchanges. He also served on the Temporary Catskill Study Commission.

Finkle said his decision to run "came very fast."

"I'm going to go all the way," he added. He's already made contact with all GOP committeemen in the county and held committee meetings in five towns.

In trying to capture the post held by Republican Fred H. DuBois, who's resigning after 18 years, Finkle said he'd run the office with the same "integrity" as DuBois. "It's always been above criticism during his tenure," he said.

World in Brief

Syrian Forces Move On Beirut

BEIRUT, LEBANON — Syrian jet fighters attacked Palestinian and leftist positions in Beirut with light missiles today and two columns of Syrian army tanks and troops advanced toward leftist Moslem strongholds on the road to the capital.

Leftist spokesmen claimed the Syrians were planning an attack on the capital itself.

Moslem gunmen fought Syrian-backed Saiqa guerrillas in the streets of the city, prompting authorities to close Beirut international airport "until further notice." The fighting was described as one of the bloodiest battles of the 14-month-old civil war.

Racial Strife Wracks London

LONDON — Hundreds of Asian youths raced through the streets of London Sunday, throwing stones at cars driven by whites and chanting "blood, blood, blood" in one of the worst racial confrontations in recent years.

The demonstrators surged to a police station and surrounded it until officers inside agreed to release two jailed comrades.

Close Gulf To Foreign Fishing

MEXICO CITY — Mexico has closed the 600-mile Gulf of California to foreign fishing and proclaimed an economic zone extending 200 miles from its Pacific and Gulf coasts to restrict fishing and offshore mining.

U.S. embassy sources said the move would not have a dramatic impact on American fishermen because there are not many fish in the affected waters and U.S. boats do not generally fish there.

Butz Blasts Food-Cancer Law

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz called "utter nonsense" a federal law banning cancer-causing additives in food.

In a speech to the Institute of Food Technologists, Butz said the 1958 law banning use as a food additive of anything found to cause cancer seemed on the surface to be a good idea.

The Car Rolled for a Stroll

A small car with an urge to roam decided about 8 p.m. last night not to wait for its owner, Sylvia Day of Woodstock, to return from dinner. The auto rolled out of a restaurant parking lot, across Route 212, then cruised down Route 375 and traveled halfway across the pedestrian walkway on Millstream Bridge. Rescuing the car from a sticky situation were Woodstock Constables Michael Grehl and George Hess. Damage to the bridge, the car, and the car's ego was minor.

WHAT IS A BROTHER ?
A brother is someone especially likable
He has a great sense of humor & loves to tease.
He's the one you can depend on when you need him,
and he does the nicest things for you ..
When you least expect them
A brother is someone you always want the best for
..because he deserves it
And tho' he may disagree with you now & then,
He'll always stand by you & you know it ..
Life is not the same without him.
I often sit and think of him, and then the teardrops fall...
For tho' there are many in this world,
mine was the best of all ".

Beame Renews Appeal For University

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mayor Abraham Beame has renewed his appeal to the state legislature for funds to make it possible for the City University to reopen for final examinations.

The mayor, in a statement Sunday, said the 270,000-student university, shut since it was unable to meet a payroll May 29, "will remain closed unless all concerned parties work together on a fair and equitable solution."

The mayor urged passage of a $24 million appropriation that would enable CUNY to complete the school year. "How long, in conscience, can we ask our young people to wait for action to redeem our promise of opportunity and safeguard their fair chance for higher education?" Beame asked.

Beame, noting that the Board of Higher Education has already moved to impose tuition fees at CUNY at a level comparable with that at the State University, reiterated his plea that the legislature grant aid to CUNY on the same basis as that given to the state system.

"How can we justify parity of tuition but deny parity of funding?" the mayor asked, adding that the state contributes $3,000 per student to SUNY and only $1,000 for each CUNY student.

Pay Raises Eyebrows

NEW YORK — Consolidated Edison's giving its chairman, Charles F. Luce, a $40,000 annual pay raise while asking the Public Service Commission for a $249.8 million rate increase has raised some eyebrows — particularly at City Hall.

"We would hope that any consideration of increases in executive level salaries ... would be seriously looked at by the Public Service Commission in light of (the) ... rate increase request," a spokesman for Mayor Abraham Beame said Sunday, commenting on Luce's raise.

The utility's board of trustees offered and Luce accepted the 25 per cent pay boost last week, a company spokesman said. Friday, Con Ed officials asked the PSC for a 10.4 per cent rate increase, citing inflation and the need to maintain the security of investments.

BETTY CHAVIS

Betty Chavis Named 'Black Achiever'

KINGSTON—Betty Chavis has made it on the job and off the job.

Mrs. Chavis was recently named a Black Achiever in the annual awards program sponsored by the Harlem Branch of the YMCA. Last year, she was a runnerup.

The Black Achiever program is designed to show young people that blacks can advance in business and industry and make significant contributions to local communities.

Mrs. Chavis joined the New York Telephone Company 24 years ago as an operator and moved through the ranks to her present position an assistant manager of operator services at the company's Kingston toll office.

She serves as recording secretary of the Coach House Players and recently spent part of her vacation serving as production manager for a comedy presented by the Players. The job was a challenge since fire had destroyed sets, costumes and lighting equipment.

"We had to start from scratch," says Mrs. Chavis. "It presented some unusual problems but in the long run it was worth the effort because the proceeds help youngsters go to college."

Mrs. Chavis once wanted to be a teacher, but gave up that goal after attending college for several years. However, she's still spent a lot of time in the classroom, training new operators. She is a member of the Big Sisters' organization. She advises a church youth group and helped organize a youth group sponsored by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. She's active in a parent teacher organization even though her daughter has long since been graduated from the school.

She encourages youngsters to "have a little initiative and succeed on your own. When you do something yourself, you appreciate the accomplishment much more, she says.

Betty Chavis should know. That's the way she's done it.

Church Men Display Culinary Talents; Bridal Show Features Gowns from 1820

By Susan B. Matson
Special Correspondent

ACCORD — The clink of special occasion china and the rustle of wedding gowns were the happy sounds in the Rochester Reformed Church in Accord on a recent Friday evening. More than 100 women and girls enjoyed a Mother-Daughter Salad Supper prepared and served by the men of the church. Following dinner a bridal fashion show brought "oohs and aahs" from the crowd.

Mrs. Linda Martin was coordinator of the event. Bud Stedge was in charge of the kitchen. Each of the tables was attractively set in a wedding theme by two hostesses who also made a wedding cake to serve as centerpiece and dessert.

Church men displayed culinary talents preparing a wide variety of salads tastefully garnished and served from an appealing buffet. Waiters with towel-draped arms served coffee with special flair.

Following presentation of gifts by Mrs. Martin for the oldest mother, newest mother, mother with the most daughters, the most recent bride and the woman married the longest, and the family with the most generations present, a bridal fashion show was presented in the church sanctuary.

Leading off the show was the wedding dress of Jeanne Bollin's great grandmother, worn in Wales around 1820. A handmade dress of dark colored brocade taffeta with dark apron, a shawl and hat, it offered sharp contrast to today's gowns.

Rosewitha Davis' great grandmother was married in 1843 in Austria in a gown of dark green taffeta which was modeled by nine-year-old Sherry Martin, showing how tiny great grandmother must have been.

In 1868 Marion Sahler's grandmother was wed in a gown of complex design with bustle, lamb's wool padding in the bust area and much intricate detail. Some extensive research was required to learn how this dress was made and worn.

Cultural contrast was offered as Mrs. Sharon Wong modeled her exquisite white satin reception gown. Handmade by her mother in the Oriental style, Mrs. Wong's gown was embroidered in pink sequins and beads with symbolic dragon, for a man, and pheasant, symbolizing a woman. Gold jewelry, a gift from the bride's mother, carry through these symbolisms also.

A total of nineteen gowns worn by brides from 1820 to the 1970's brought back floods of memories and sparked conversations of wedding tales as women recalled special wedding days and little girls dreamed of theirs yet to come.

The wedding gowns will go back to closets and attic trunks, but the memories renewed and shared will leave a special glow for some time to come.

Dear Abby

Is Topic Worth a 13 Cent Stamp?

DEAR ABBY: While buying postage stamps at the post office, the man behind me complained to the stamp clerk that the price of postage was about to break him.

The postal employee said, Well, either deliver the letter yourself or call long distance!

That postal employee should bear these facts in mind: Since 1956, long-distance telephone rates have been DECREASED 14 times and increased only twice!

On the other hand, look at what has happened to the postal rates· First Class 1956— 3 cents 1963— 5 cents 1968— 6 cents 1971— 8 cents 1974—10 cents 1975—13 cents (First ounce and 11 cents for each additional ounce. Airmail· 1956—5 cents; 1958—7 cents;1964—8 cents;1968—10 cents; 1971—11 cents; 1074—13 cents; 1975—(All first class mail now goes air.) WOONSOCKET

DEAR WOON. It's still a bargain. And that last increase has had a sobering effect on us. Now we stop and wonder if what we have to say is really worth 13 cents.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a grown man, well over 21, and I've had enough experience along this line to know better, but I got myself into a tight spot.

About six months ago I started dating this cute young chick, and we really dug each other. The problem is, I did mention marriage, but I most definitely did not say when

Well, I really don't want to get married, Abby I've been that route and it's not for me, but you know how it is when the lights are low and the music gets to you—a guy makes a lot of campaign promises.

I guess this chick told her mother and all her friends that we're getting married sometime late summer. Abby, I'm not about to marry this gal or anybody else right now, so what should.I do?—TALKS TOO MUCH

DEAR TALKS: A man who makes campaign promises is definitely a candidate, so prepare to run—in one direction or the other.

DEAR ABBY. Because you are able to solve so many diverse problems, I am presenting mine.

In our home we have color TV, which is on almost all of the time. It is situated so that I am very close to it while I am in my kitchen doing my laundry

I have read that radiation from color TV can be dangerous, so I don't dare do the laundry while the TV is on

My husband insists that I am being foolish to worry about the radiation What are the facts?—MRS. S.

DEAR MRS. S.: After considerable research, the consensus is that the radiation from a color TV is so minimal, it is no threat whatsoever, so go ahead and do your laundry, lady.

For Abby's new booklet, What Teenagers Want to Know, send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212 Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (24 cents) envelope.

Answering Mones

Dear Editor:

This letter is in response to Legislator Mones' diatribe which appeared in the Letters to the Editor section of the May 27th Freeman.

While I am not attempting to answer Mr. Mones for Jim Gilpatric, who I'm sure Will respond in appropriate fashion, in his own right, Mr. Mones opened the door by his sarcastic reference to me, and as would normally be expected, I have chosen to accept his invitation.

Mr. Mones asks why the majority of Democratic legislators from the City of Kingston refused to back the Republican sponsored sales tax proposal in March of this year. Perhaps if he paid more attention to legislative debate and local news reporting he'd know the answer. Nonetheless I'll answer the question, again. We Democratics believed, as did some fiscally concerned Republican legislators, that if the sales tax option was approved so as to enable the legislature to enact a sales tax during this calendar year, the sales tax would have been used to mask the financial problems of Ulster County government, without cutting spending. As a matter of fact, the freeze in spending implemented by the legislature was only acted upon when it became obvious that the sales tax option would not be approved unless the legislature demonstrated fiscal responsibility and concern. Had Mr. Mones and the majority of his Republican colleagues not received this message, the likely result would have been unrestrained growth in county spending.

Earlier this year, the county legislature announced its intention to reduce the size of county government through an attrition program. Attrition means that when a position is vacated, it will not be filled. Yet, only this week, after the fiscal plight of Ulster County in general, and the City of Kingston in particular, became obvious, Mr. Mones voted to fill vacancies in better than 50 positions in the social services department. He voted against only two requested positions out of about 57. To add insult to injury, Mr. Mones chided me and Legislators Hyatt, Quick, and Dwyer for adhering to the freezes which his party recommended, by voting against the filling of many of these vacancies. Yes, Legislator Mones has truly demonstrated that his concern for the public is second to his concern for the governmental bureaucracy he helped to create.

Last year, before he was re-elected to the legislature, Mel Mones told me that Mr. Savago would dread his return to the legislature, because "he would make Glenn Debrosky look liberal." Yet, to date, he has done just the opposite. He has supported the wishes of the Republican leadership almost 100 per cent of the time, but, cannot get his Republican colleagues to vote with him against "The Rape of Kingston", not even one. This speaks highly of Mr. Mones, and the quality of representation he is providing his constituents.

If Mr. Mones and the majority of his Republican colleagues don't start enforcing their own resolutions, and living up to their intent, the affect of their lethargy and lack of concern will engulf every citizen of Ulster County. If county spending continues as it is, Ulster County taxpayers will face a tax increase of at least 20 per cent in the property tax, plus an additional 1 per cent in the sales tax, or if the sales tax option is denied us, 65 per cent in the property tax. I repeat these will be minimum tax increases. More realistically, I predict that the tax increase will equal at least 30 per cent plus a 1 per cent sales tax increase, or if the sales tax option is denied us, a 75 per cent increase in the property tax.

As Mr. Mones said i n his letter to the editor, "The people can't take any more." I suggest that he start following his own advice instead of contaminating our environment with hot air pollutants. I suggest that he practice saying "no", and once he masters the word, put it to use in the Ulster County Legislature. Or, if these suggestions are unacceptable, I suggest he practice his explanation to his constituents for when they get their tax bill next year.

As to the Democratic members of the legislature, Mr. Mones may rest assured that his rhetoric will not silence our efforts. We believe, and will continue to believe that it is a far more acceptable alternative to compel our department heads to utilize economic restraint, than to compel our taxpayers to forfeit their homes to Ulster County at delinquent tax sales.

Yours sincerely,
LOUIS M. KLEIN

Demeaning Wage

Dear Editor:

In Tuesday's Freeman, Mr. George Lawrence's letter talked about "work not demeaning," and his attack on those young men on unemployment and welfare. Let's set things straight.

Every week I see articles in the Freeman concerning unemployment. Thousands out of work, employers unable to find qualified employes. I hear of men and women that are unwilling to work. Some say they're lazy and content with what our government agencies give them. I say that's a lot of bunk.'

Recently, I was laid off from a large manufacturing company in Poughkeepsie. I knew it would be tough on the small amount I'd collect on unemployment. (I didn't know it at the time, but the lay off was only for two weeks- now I'm back at work.) Although I had only been there a few years, and on the bottom of th e ladder, I made a good wage, over four dollars per hour, plus many good company benefits, medical, retirement, etc.

While unemployed, getting $81.00 a week on unemployment, I figured I'd better get another job quickly. I began the rounds, applications everywhere, answering the classified ads by resume, letter, in person, and even through employment agencies.

Finally' a break. A local company, Dana Manufacturing in Port Ewen had an ad in the Freeman, "Wanted: experienced drill press, punch press, screw mached operators, etc.," so I sent off the resume. I knew I'd qualify, I had the experience and know-how. I was called, and waited an hour for the interviewer. He told me that I was what he needed and he wanted me to start immediately. Great? No'. Because of my experience I was to receive $2.50 per hour. I was shocked'. Can any family man, anyone with any bills, house or apartment, live and eat on $2,50 an hour?

Well, Mr. Lawrence, you say no work is demeaning. That wage was demeaning to me.

I could get $81.00 on unemployment or $100.00 gross by working, with a net take home pay of $72.00. I could stay home and make an extra $9.00. That's not lazy, that's economics.

The crux of the problem seems to be low wages. Why not pay some decent wages? Try answering some of the ads in the Freeman classifieds, ask about the wage. Some area businessmen make me laugh and others bring me to the brink of profanity.

The next time one of you people on welfare or unemployment faces a local businessman who offers you a demeaning wage of $2.30 or $2.50 an hour, ask him if he can live on it. Then drive uptown past his estate or down to the creek by his yacht, or take a look at his Caddy in the driveway, think about it.

The problem is hoarding by the man, and starvation and poverty for the people of the area.

Let's hope some of those big wheels wake up and start paying adequate wages. Salaries that are justified by experience, job requirements, longevity, and the cost of living. There are a lot of us out here who want to work, just treat us fairly, like human beings. A decent wage, that's all.

Grateful Hospital

Dear Editor:

The community response to the recent Zonta Walkathon in support of the Renal Dialysis Unit at the Kingston Hospital was most gratifying. There was a large and enthusiastic crowd of "walkers" and tremendous support given by the "sponsors."

The proceeds from this event will benefit the patients who will be receiving renal dialysis treatments. For each patient the first three months of renal dialysis therapy will not be covered by medical insurance. The costs would be prohibitive for those persons needing one, two or three treatments per week. The money collected from this Walkathon will help defray these costs and enable these patients who would otherwise not be able to afford it to receive the therapy they desperately need.

We at the Kingston Hospital are sincerely grateful to the community and to the public-spirited members of Zonta who organized the walk, most especially Kay Sullivan and Mickey Duncan.

Takes Exception

Dear Editor:

I find Nicholas von Hoffman's comments about Israel in a recent issue of the Freeman intemperate, inaccurate and insensitive.

Israel is the only democracy in the Mideast unlike Syria to which von Hoffman likened Israel. Unlike the Arab nations-many of whose wealth is prodigal- the emphasis Israel places on culture and the arts in spite of its serious economic plight is phenomenal. Israel is the only Mideast country whose citizens do not engage in hijacking, violence and guerrilla viciousness euphemistically called "guerrilla warfare". Its governance of the victims of Arab intransigence under its mandate is carried out in a way that is unparalleled by any other victorious nation. When its enemies engage, as they recently did, in fomenting violence, Israel takes the necessary measures to protect herself; to do otherwise would be absurd.

Israel needs no apologies from anyone; its courage and determination in the face of the climate in the UN is admirable and merits the admiration of every lover of freedom and advocate of democracy.

The Arabs have exacerbated the refugee problem. They could have cared for the refugees while protesting their plight and could have made their lot less onerous. Instead, they preferred to allow their own people to suffer, a fact that Israel would not and does not permit- a fact that makes her supreme among the nations of the world in her concern for her people.

Critics like von Hoffman are either ill-informed or misinformed. In that case they had better remain silent.

Sincerely,
SYLVIA DAY

Cutbacks and Red Tape

WASHINGTON — Millions of American workers are exposed to deadly, poisonous substances on the job. Yet the effort to save their health, perhaps even their lives, has been seriously hampered by cutbacks and red tape.

The best estimate is that one out of every three workers in this country will come down with occupational diseases. Toxic substances, according to another estimate, causes 100,000 job-related deaths each year.

Yet even this disturbing death figure is now considered far too low. Labor Dept. experts have just learned that most of the nation's doctors are unable to diagnose occupational diseases. This means that most deaths from occupational diseases go unreported.

The Labor experts have also discovered that occupational injuries account for an alarming 96 per cent of all reported illnesses at nonagricultural places of work. Yet, industrial plants provide few health services and almost no environmental monitoring.

The Labor Dept. has appealed to Congress for more help to cope with the problem. Of 2,000 industrial hygienists in the United States, only 135 work for the department. Training programs have also been cut back.

As one Labor official told our associate Marc Smolonsky: "There is an appalling lack of manpower." Meanwhile, the problem steadily gets worse, not better, as thousands of new chemicals are developed each year in factories across the country.

The department has tried to set standards for these toxic chemicals as they appear. But President Ford, whose main emphasis is upon cutting costs, requires an inflationary impact statement before new standards can be put into effect. This has slowed the regulatory effort.

Nevertheless, a small, unsung staff is fighting a heroic battle to safeguard workers from occupational disease and death. Hundreds of thousands will die, however, because the problem has been given a low priority.

LIVING IN SIN: Some congressmen keep mistresses; others live in sin with the special interests.

The darling of the banking lobby, for example, is Rep. Thomas Ludlow Ashley, D.-Ohio. Whatever the bankers want from Congress, the bankers usually get. And Ashley helps them get it.

His service for the nation's financial institutions, coincidentally, helps to boost his own net worth. For he owns stocks and bonds in American Financial Corp., a blue-chip institution that owns, among other things, Cincinnati's Provident Bank where Ashley has a loan.

Banks are regulated by federal agencies which, in turn, are overseen by Congress. This is delegated to the Banking and Currency committees of the Senate and House, which also hand le banking and housing legislation.

Ashley is the third man on the totem pole at the House Banking Committee. From his No. 3 perch, he exercises maximum influence with minimum visibility.

The late chairman, Wright Patman, D.-Texas, distrusted bankers instinctively. But invariably, Ashley would rally a majority of the members who routinely would overrule Patman and would vote more benefits for banks.

Once Ashley called a rump session to approve a banking bill that Patman had tried to block. While Patman was away, Ashley summoned the probanking members behind closed committee doors. For secrecy's sake, they worked without lights.

Ashley has always found the bankers most appreciative. At election time, they have often showered Ashley with more campaign money than he really needs. For he usually runs a low-key campaign, which costs comparatively little.

Once, the Ohio Bankers Assn. wrote to bank presidents across the state, urging them to support the congressman "in every possi ble way."

During his last campaign, Ashley spent barely $23,000 on his election race. Of this, banking associations, financial groups and bank executives contributed over $5,000.

After he was re-elected again, Ashley collected another $3,250 in honorariums last year for speeches to the Mortgage Bankers, American Bankers Assn., Ohio Citizens Trust Co., Ohio Savings and Loan Assn. and the New York Savings Banks Assn.

Ashley congenially pooh-poohed any suggestion of impropriety in his relationships with financial institutions. His holdings in American Financial Corp., he said, don't amount to much. He speaks to financial groups, he explained, to tell them about financial legislation.

"I don't have any problem with conflict of interest," he said emphatically. "Absolutely none. I can look anybody straight in the eye and say that."

What Gives Sex a Bad Name

The colossal mistake of this generation is called Equality of Sex. Not, mind you, equality of the sexes, which nullifies the dominance of females by males. Equality of sex, on the face of it, gives to women and men the same right to virtues and vices.

It is not a law; it is an asserted right. Surely it is just for women to have the same right to sex as men. The pages of history depict the woman as the sexual object, or target, of the male.

Tacit equality emerged in the 1960s. It was, we thought, a good thing. The role of sexual aggressors was new to the gentle sex, and most observers were sure that the females would use their new power to raise the moral standards of the male.

The opposite is true. Women are using their new "right" to abase themselves with any man in any bed at any time. The men never had it so good. The natural magnetism of women, which once brought young men to the altar, has degenerated into a series of one-night stands. Moral values are almost valueless.

Ladies who refuse to play the game endure lonely nights. Venereal disease, which has always been the grinning skeleton of sexual freedom, has hit new highs all over the nation. Which leads to a melancholy question of philosophy: Have women become their own worst enemies?

The remarkable aspect of sex is that the roles of male versus female are constant throughout the animal kingdom: The male prowls for a mate; the female selects the male she most admires, or loves, and follows "wither he guest." From humans down through moose to mouse, the females of the species have never sold themselves cheaply.

There is a poignance in recalling that the old-time prostitute, who had no rights to her body, took the money and then begged, "First tell me you love me." She required that little fiction as an excuse for debasing herself. Today ali a boy has to do is to array his toothbrush next to hers and they are in business.

You are not being addressed by a pietistic "square." This particular soul was blackened some time ago by all the lovely sins. Regret erases nothing. Nor would I change anything if I had it to do over again. My admiration for the female is as unalterable as my love for the sea.

Nor will anyone entice me to state that the next generation is going to hell in a hand basket. Not all women are promiscuous. The point is that a good segment of our womanhood have lowered their standards of morality.

In Detroit, Dr. Gertrude Zemon-Gass says: "Many people state that people are just more open about extramarital infidelity, that people are talking about it more. I disagree. It is increasing."

It is easy to find a virtuous wife. It is almost impossible to find one who has been unfaithful only once. Decades ago, Kinsey learned that 26 per cent of married women admitted they had violated their marriage vows at least once. No marriage counsellor is willing to make a statistical guess today.

"Women are beginning to go outside marriage for sexual satisfaction," says Dr. William Nichols, "something they have not done in the past." I disagree. The difference between then and now is the difference between shame and arrogance.

Man's worst misconception was in believing that women had no sexual desires. Eleanor Roosevelt told her daughter Anna that sex was something a wife must learn to "endure." Those were the bad old days. My mother told my sister that she went to the marital bed "with a pillow over my face."

It is a long step forward to conceding that women have the same sexual desires as men and achieve the same joys. Surely God would not have invented sex if it was not to be a great thing for two people.

Abuse is what gives sex a bad name. A casual glance at history shows that the Greeks and Romans remained great only as long as their moral fiber was high. Orgy led to anarchy. Anarchy led to defeat. Defeat led to dissolution. It's as easy as falling down a flight of stairs.

The monumental error of science was not in devising an atom bomb. It's the pill. This little contraceptive took the fear out of sex for women. Women swallowed the pill and demanded what they called sexual freedom.

When Moses came down from the mountain, he had 10 Commandments. One was: "Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's wife." If God knew then what He knows now, He might heve included an 11th: "Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's husband."...

Oil on Troubled Coal

WASHINGTON - Some of the people in West Virginia are trying to figure out what happened to about 50 billion tons of low-sulfur Appalachian coal. It was there in U.S. Bureau of Mines' estimates of coal reserves until the mid or late '60s and then it vanished. Since that's enough coal to take care of our needs for at least 50 years, the West Virginia people are reasonably sure they would have noticed if somebody had come, dug it up and shipped it out.

What happened, of course, is that it got redefined as high-sulfur coal and was shifted over to another column in the tables. That's bad news for West Virginia and the coal-producing regions of neighboring states since the high-sulfur stuff is regarded as an environmental hazard and can't be burned.

At the same time the nation has been told not to worry its pretty little head about such matters because there's plenty of low-sulfur, healthy coal out west. You can't have missed that message with all those "thought you'd like to know" television commercials sponsored by Exxon.

The fact that it's Exxon which is passing on this reassuring information gives rise to a question: Is the environmental safety of various kinds of coal determined by its chemical properties or by who owns it? Western coal ownership is dominated by oil companies and railroads. The latter stand to make a double buck out of it, first from the coal itself and then the profits of shipping it. That may explain this interesting quote by George R. Powe of Burlington, Northern Inc.:

"Ours is both a transportation and a natural resources firm. We have minable coal reserves estimated at more than 11.4 billion tons, chiefly in Montana and North Dakota. Much of this coal lies in thick deposits close to the surface where it can be mined cheaply... In addition to the use of western coal by Detroit area utilities, western coal will move by rail and barge to power plants in the Middle West and East, even to West Virginia, the nation's major coal producing state."

Until recently bringing coals to Newcastle was in the same category as selling refrigerators to Eskimos. Now it appears it's on its way to becoming national fuel policy.

You can't help wondering if eastern coal would be so environmentally obnoxious if there were a different pattern of ownership in Appalachia. The oil companies haven't been able to nuzzle their way into the region as they have in the west. By tradition, contacts and knowledge it's been relatively easy for them to lease government-owned coal fields in the west, while eastern coal ownership is private and, to a considerable degree, broken up into smaller holdings. Thus oil with its dominant influence in the Federal Energy Administration has had both motive and the opportunity to kill off eastern coal in favor of the western product.

Is western coal truly safer? There is a very large amount of eastern coal - nobody knows exactly how much - that assays at significantly less than one per cent sulfur content. That makes it environmentally competitive with western coal. There's also a lot that comes in at around 1.20 to 1.30 per cent, which is above Environmental Protection Agency standards, but that doesn't necessarily knock it out of consideration.

In general eastern coal gives off much, much more heat per pound. Western coal tends to be very poor grade stuff, which means you have to burn more of it to get one kilowatt of electricity, so much more of it that, even if it has a lower sulfur content, it may still be the greater pollutant. This is especially true if a given power plant burns a combination of low- and middle-sulfur content eastern coal.

The case for the superiority of western coal hasn't been established, only the drawbacks to its use. The most obvious is to put West Virginia back on the dole. "Our mines are closing, coal prices are declining and jobs are being lost as western coal invades traditional West Virginia markets," laments the mayor of Charleston, W. Va., John Hutchinson. "At the same time we are wasting thousands of gallons of oil to bring western coal to these markets."

By contrast Appalachian coal is situated in the middle of a vast inland river complex so that it can be shipped to many of the major markets of the East and Midwest by barge, which is not only the cheapest form of transportation, but the most energy efficient. Moreover, much, though by no means all, of eastern coal is to be found under mountainous terrain that's not particularly desirable for agriculture. Every effort ought to be made to use it before we strip mine the wheat fields of North Dakota.

The decision to truck low-quality, high-cost western coal to markets more than a thousand miles away could not have been made so easily if the electric utility companies had an incentive to act in an economically judicious way. Many of them can pass increases in fuel costs directly on to their customers, so why bother shopping for price? Not all of them behave in this profligate fashion. Several years ago Duke Power in North Carolina not only signed a contract with a small West Virginia company for low-cost, low-sulfur coal, but arranged for a line of credit so that the mining company would have the capital to expand its production.

Appalachia has the single largest concentration of high-quality coal in the world. Its metallurgical coal is exported around the globe to make steel. If we're going to give up on a resource of this size and value, the least we can do is have more of a debate on it th an a couple of Exxon commercials.

When you consider the pangs the New York State Council on the Arts had to suffer to get grant money from Albany, you begin to realize that in the near future applying for an artistic grant in New York will be the last thing you do before they wheel you, laughing, off to the asylum.

It's clear to the senators that the arts belong on television, not hanging around just anywhere unpoliced. With this in mind I decided to dissociate myself from the "artistic element" and look to the sciences for my salvation.

The competition is keen, of course. Consulting firms from out of state crash in with thousands of dollars worth of equipment and barge around on the Hudson trailing laboratory vials in the water. They make a lot of money showing Central Hudson and the rest of us that so few fish will die from an atomic power plant that to be concerned about it is to play the fool indeed.

And as any right-thinking representative will tell you without even a nudge, the state doesn't need any more fools.

It's a short step from there to the realization that big business has the money these days, so I set myself to workng up a highly controlled scientific project that will appeal to some big companies and their constituents in the state government. (You know, the ones who do their voting right on the floor.)

It will be an exhaustive survey taken among the employes of General Electric throughout the country to show conclusively that PCB is nothing more than three capital letters chosen from the alphabet by conniving environmentalists and that what they secretly stand for is "Phisherman to Control Business."

Here are some of the questions I've drafted for the GE survey:

1. Do you think industrial wastes should be allowed to run freely (Remember: it's a free country) into the Hudson River? Or should the wastes be trapped at great expense, said expense to be subtracted weekly from your paycheck, and recycled to meet the unconscionable demands of wacky environmentalists? (Note: we all know that "recycling is some sort of Ralph Naderish screwball invention.) If you have read to the end of the question, check one:

☐ Yes ☐ No

2. Which is big business better for, the country or the individual? Check either:

☐ Yes ☐ Yes

(At this point the crucial question, the object of the survey, is inserted in the middle of decoy questions so the testee is unaware of its importance. This sound polling practice, as demonstrated in countless psychological tests to determine basic human needs — for example the need to exert power over others.)

3. What does PCB secretly stand for? Check one and ONLY one!

a. Grand Old Party
b. Three Penny Opera
c. Phisherman Control Business
d Grandmother's Combat Boots

(The last choice is intended for comic relief, allowing the testee a chuckle to release tension. This has been shown extremely effective in several federally funded studies to determine if Tanzanian frogs like to laugh. Now some more decoy questions.)

4. What kind of salad dressing do you like?

a. Russian
b. Italian
c. Thousand Island
d. Hudson River

5. Would a victory-over-environmentalists banquet be to your liking, the cost NOT to be subtracted from your paycheck?

☐ Yes ☐ No

6. At such an event, what would be your choice of entree? Check one and ONLY one!

a. Duck a l'orange mit kartoffeln und kraut

b. Filet mignon a la droight de seigneur

c. Hamburger, french fries and Coke

NOTE: If you feel you may have answered some of the questions incorrectly go back now and make the changes you desire. Once you've handed in your paper to the proper authorities, it's TOO LATE.

I am confident this sort of controlled scientific project will appeal to the more sensible men in Albany who will then appeal to the more sensible men at, say, oh-h-h, just picking names out of a hat now, say General Electric.

I estimate the project will take about two years and, if I spend at my usual thrifty rate, cost about $90,000 plus a few extras for special services. Which is peanuts when you take a look at the military budget.

There will be travel expenses, of course, paper and pencils with erasers to be bought and salaries for assistants, who would need to be feminine and curvaceous to better advertise the importance of the project. I intend to save hotel expenses by having us all stay in one big room.

With the proper funds I'm confident I can find the proper truth.

By United Press International

Trans World Airlines was flying today as negotiators discussed details of an unsigned tentative contract averting a strike by 5,500 flight attendants. But a bevy of disputes plagued other American industries.

A strike was planned against a railroad and contract disputes tied up shipping in northern California and the San Francisco Bay area, and threatened medical services in New York and Connecticut.

A tentative agreement was reached Saturday between TWA and Local 551 of the Air Transport Division-Transport Workers Union. Although the agreement was not signed and negotiators were still going over the language, a union spokesman said the chances of a strike appeared "very slim."

Union secretary-treasurer Jim Tuller said picketers were sent home late Saturday.

TWA carries some 43,000 passengers a day.

Some 3,000 United Transporation Union members plan a strike against the St. Louis-San Francisco railroad Tuesday in a grievance over the railroad's destruction of eating and toilet facilities in Springfield, Mo.

A railroad spokesman called the disputed facilities "old shanties," said they were no longer in use and expressed surprise at learning the UTU was preparing to walk out at 10:30 p.m. Tuesday.

A strike by members of the Teamsters Union and the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union shut down West Coast warehouses. But officials said effects of the walkout would not be felt by consumers for about three weeks because many firms increased their inventories in anticipation of a strike.

The head of New York City's 18,000-member Municipal Hospital Workers Union said the union might resort to violence if the city goes ahead with 1,450 planned layoffs and four facility shutdowns to save money.

"The membership is marvelous, but they're only people," said Lillian Roberts, associate director of District 37, who appeared at hearings by a panel selected to arbitrate the impasse between the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employes and New York's Health and Hospital Corp.

A lingering strike by some 70,000 United Rubber Workers was causing problems for the food stamp plan. The workers have been on strike against Firestone, Goodyear, B.F. Goodrich and Uniroyal tire companies for nearly seven weeks.

The strike was affecting Etowah County, Ala., where some 3,000 workers were on strike against a Goodyear plant at Gadsen.

A spokesman for the county Department of Pensions and Security said its food stamp office was turning away 50 to 60 persons a day because it was unable to process the necessary papers.

"It looks like the number will be steadily increasing unless the strike is settled this month," he said.

It Boils Down to Hubert Humphrey

This is the time of year when conversations are apt to begin with, "Well, who do you think will win the conventions?" Whether or not the asker will admit it, he or she is asking you not one question but two. The first is as phrased and the unspoken one is, "Who do you want to win—who are you for?"

Taking it simply as asked, I'll go out on my limb and say that, if I had to bet right now (even after last Tuesday's primaries), it would be that the Republicans will still end by nominating Jerry Ford for a go at the presidency in his own right and that the Democrats will choose Jimmy Carter to oppose him. Remember, please, that put "this opinion" in the "if I had to be" category; a sure fire bet I'm not prepared to make on either—yet.

But it's when I come to set my "rathers" on paper that I find the going really tough—as obviously, the majority of us have already found it.

Immediate qualification: I, personally, don't find it tough at all to say whom I would rather be the Republicans' nominee. I think of Reagan as a real threat to peace, at home as well as abroad—and I am raally sad that the party that once elected Lincoln couldn't come up with a sounder challenger to take on our Nixon—appointed president, whose track record is so spotty.

It's when I come to draw up balance sheets listing what I like and don't like about the Democrats' candidates that I feel indecision setting in.

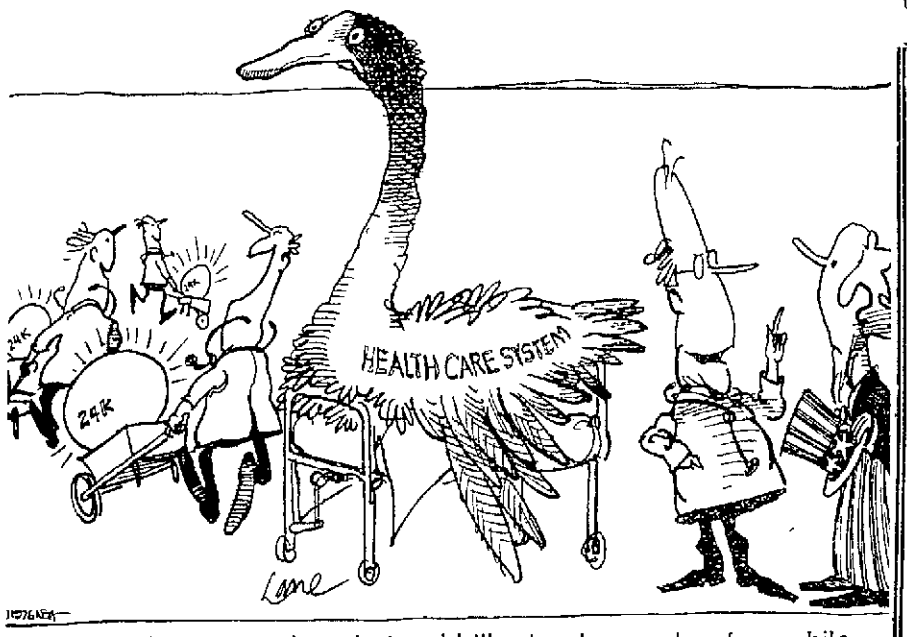
Take frontrunner Carter. I had a long list of things I felt I liked about him when he first named himself a candidate. Obviously, they were solely based on what writing about him I had come upon. But then, when the press and the tube began to focus on him, (as they most certainly should have much earlier than they did), the liability side of his ledger entries lengthened. I most certainly do not like the record of his reaction to the Vietnam horror. I find myself agreeing with his critics on his opportunism. And damn it, I have come not to like that phoney-smiling face the cameras so mercilessly thrust at me.

I liked what I'd seen and read about Brown but gave him up as a serious candiate before he said he was one. He has come in too late for me to arrive at a convincing analysis.

Of the younger candidates, I admit to a shine for Udall (and that I voted for him in a primary). But I have to admit, too, that my feeling my be influenced by having known and admired his father, who was an honest man. I think his son is, too. And God help us all because we fallible humans make choices based on such evidence—I like the face he shows me.

But somewhere deep in me is the gut feeling that the best qualified man to be our post-Nixon-and-Ford president is still old Hubert Humphrey, who has lived through so much of our history and who, I believe, has come to some kind of peace with himself. I don't believe he would be a pushover for the "special interests" that divide us now and I do believe he is a proven product, as dead straight as a politician can be, and that he would know and fight for the best in America.

So, very much in the rough, that's how I answer the question I began this piece with. My advice? Make up your own mind; it's your country and your future as well as mine. You've still the right to speak up.



"It doesn't seem serious but we'd like to observe her for a while longer."

Is There Truth After Love?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — One of the main weapons in the arsenal of militant consumers is the "truth-in."

A "truth-in" is like the "sitins" staged by civil rights militants in the 1950s and the "love-ins" held by militant peace demonstrators in the 1960s. Only different.

"Truth-ins" require some sort of legislative or government regulatory action. One example is the "Truth in Lending" law that Congress passed in response to consumer demands for public disclosure of interest rates and other credit information.

New "truth-in" proposals are constantly being put forth, the latest being a "truth in used cars" rerulation under consideration by the Federal Trade Commission.

It would require used car dealers to reveal any known defects in the vehicles they sell. Data about mileage, prior use and repairs also would have to be posted on the sticker.

Seeking a dealer's eye view of the proposal, I had a talk with "Honest Sid" Lemonpusher, who operates a used car lot in my neighborhood.

"I'm way ahead of them," he told me. "I've been disclosing that type of information for years."

He patted the fender of a 1959 Studebaker that was featured as the "Bargain of the Week."

"Get a load of this little beauty," he said. "It's only been driven 87 miles."

"What about prior use?" I asked suspiciously.

He directed my attention to the price sticker. At the bottom it said: "This auto has had only one previous owner, a little old lady who drove it one block to church on Sundays."

I said, "The proposed FTC regulation also would require you to list any repairs that were made before you offered a car for resale. Did you do any work on this one?"

"The only thing we did was replace the left rear tire. That's the one prospective buyers always kick, so we like to make sure it is sturdy enough to withstand the punishment."

"What about defects?"

"We never put a defective car on our lot," Lemonpusher said indignantly.

"Then why is a front wheel missing?"

"Now you're talking about deficiencies. There's a difference between being defective and being deficient. If a wheel won't turn, that's a defect. But if it's merely missing, that is only a deficiency."

While "Honest Sid" went to answer the telephone, I browsed around looking over some of his other bargains. I noticed that the information on their stickers was identical to that posted on the '59 Studebaker.

Sickness Strikes The Great Race

WATKINS GLEN (UPI) — Sickness, it seems, has struck the cross-country "Great American Horse Race" — but it's not the riders in the summer-long event who are under the weather.

Approximately one third of the horses involved in the $50,000 race to Sacramento, Cal., have come down with what race officials call a "cold or flu-type virus". But officials said the race would continue toward the West Coast this morning from Watkins Glen.

A race spokesman said the horses first became sick in Cortland, on the third day of the summer-long ride. By the time the nearly 30 riders reached Watkins Glen, up to 35 horses had been infected.

One of the veterinarians accompanying the riders said the virus didn't appear to be serious. He said cool, damp weather along the trail and the stress of the event had probably aggravated the situation.

A race official said all 158 horses and 86 riders stayed in Watkins Glen an extra two days to "make sure the horses are all healthy". They were scheduled to leave this morning for Cameron, and should enter Pennsylvania later this week

The race involves riders from throughout the United States and seven foreign countries. It began in Frankfort, N.Y. on May 31st and is slated to end in Sacramento during the Labor Day weekend

Fountainebleau Is In The Red

MIAMI BEACH (UPI) — The landmark Fountainebleau Hotel owes nearly $1.3 million in taxes, and officials say the hotel may be put up for public auction if it does not come up with the money by November.

Fred Guldstrand, a supervisor in the county tax collector's office said the Miami-Dade Metro government could sell the 1,250-room hotel at a tax auction Nov. 1, two years after the tax bills were sent out.

"We don't have the money to pay the taxes," hotel owner Ben Novack told a city council meeting last week. He said arrangements were being made "so we can pay our taxes very soon, I hope."

Despite a brisk winter tourist season, the hotel owes taxes of $563,000 to Miami Beach, $297,000 to the Dade County school system, $292,000 to Metro and $15,000 to the Central and Southern Florida Flood Control District.

Aerialist Ends His 'Wire-In'

NIAGARA FALLS, Canada (UPI) — French aerialist Henri Rechatin had his feet back on the ground today and was waiting to see if his 15-day "live-in" on a highwire had convinced authorities to give him permission to walk a wire above the roaring Niagara Falls this September.

Rechatin ended his stay on a highwire 50 feet above a street in this resort community Sunday.

A spokesman for the group sponsoring his proposed Falls walk said Rechatin was "hopeful" the live-in would "demonstrate once and for all his ability on the highwire."

"We think a walk across the Falls — which hasn't been done for 125 years — would really be one of the spectacles of the century," said Byron Cox, public relations director of Ripley International.

Rechatin, who performed stunts on the wire four times daily during the 15 days, said he still hoped to make the Falls walk even though Canadian and United States officials had not given final approval to such a performance.

Among the stunts he performed on the highwire were balancing on a chair, walking blindfolded, walking with 12-inch daggers strapped to his heels and walking on the interior rim of a bicycle wheel

He also slept and ate his meals on the wire

Sailing By The Stars, With a Little Help

PAPEETE, Tahiti (UPI) — Crewmen of the sailing canoe Hokule'a think they have proved the accuracy of ancient Polynesian star navigation by completing a 34-day 2,860-mile voyage from Hawaii in a 60-foot double-hulled canoe.

But the ancient Polynesians did it better.

Crew members said over the weekend that their vessel was off course, but the crew accidentally learned of the error in an overhead radio message.

One of the principal objectives of the voyage, made by a 15-man crew and two National Geographic Society photographers, was to prove the accuracy of ancient navigation system. The canoe carried no modern navigational equipment of its own.

Crew members said the Hokule'a corrected its course after inadvertently overhearing a report on its position given by the Navy-Marine Mars radio system to the observer ship Moetai

A spokesman said the information enabled the canoe to alter its course to the east and arrive Friday at the island of Mataiva, about 300 miles north of Papeete

However, both the spokesman and members of the observer ship said the Hokule'a's previous heading indicated the canoe would not have veered far enough off course to miss the Society Islands altogether

Another Violent Death For A Moon Member

NEW YORK (UPI) — A young member of the Unification Church living in the Rev Sun Myung Moon's U S headquarters has become the second member of the Korean evangelist's sect to meet a violent death in a week.

Police said Allen Staggs, 20, was killed early Sunday in a fall down an elevator shaft in the former New Yorker Hotel, recently purchased by Moon for more than $5 million.

Stagg's mangled body was found inside an elevator car stopped on the second floor of the building.

His death was preceded by the fatal stabbing of another Moon follower distributing pamphlets in Brooklyn on June 1, the same day as the Moon "God Bless America Festival" There was no apparent connection between the two deaths.

Detectives said there was no immediate indication of homicide in the elevator death, and they presumed it was accidental They said they were also investigating the possibility of suicide.

The youth apparently fell from the 20th floor and crashed through the trap door in the ceiling of the elevator car, detectives said

One detective said the elevator must be run manually but has no permanent operator He said those wanting to use it had to use coathangers "or other wire contraptions" to get into the car

He said Staggs apparently thought the elevator car was on the 20th floor, opened the door with a hanger and fell down the shaft

The New Yorker housed about 2,000 "moonies" during last week's Bicentennial rally in Yankee Stadium.

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — Charlie Scott conserved his energy until just the right time.

The 6-foot-5 guard, who had fouled out of the first five games in the NBA championship series, scored 25 points to lead Boston to an 87-80 victory over the Phoenix Suns Sunday, giving the Celtics their 13th NBA crown in 19 years.

"It was about time," Scott said. "I knew JoJo (White) was tired after playing 61 minutes Friday night. I was not shooting real well, but they went in when we needed them.

"I had made up my mind I was going to stay in this game," Scott said. "It is really a thrill, and I think a lot of people finally understand what a good backcourt combination we have."

"I was almost out of gas after Friday," added White. "It was up to Charlie, and he played well. We were trying to do basically the same thing as in the other games although we tried a few new things, such as getting (Dave) down low."

White, star of Friday night's epic triple overtime victory, was named MVP of the series.

Cowens scored 21, White 15 and John Havlicek and Paul Silas 10 apiece as all five Celtic starters hit double figures. Boston got only six points from its bench.

Rookie of the year Alvan Adams led Phoenix with 20 points while Ricky Sobers added 19, Paul Westphal 14 and Gar Heard 11.

"The post position gets a lot of emphasis," explained Adams. "Somebody as good as Cowens is a big factor. The key is trying to keep him off the boards. I didn't do bad the first four games, but I didn't too well the last two. He got 17 rebounds, he just seemed to be in the right place."

Boston Coach Tommy Heinsohn refused to describe his team as old, but admitted they were "not young guys.

"You can press defensively and run for 48 minutes when you're young," the Celtics' coach said. "But we aren't. We've just got a spunky bunch of guys. We were determined out there. They caught up and could have gone ahead with a couple of steals, but like the Celtics of old, we kept going at it."

Heinsohn, who collapsed after Friday's triple overtime win in game five, said, "My doctor told me I had to settle down. It was difficult and you may not believe it but I was working at it. I didn't feel too good after the last win but I feel great now."

Havlicek, a 14-year veteran, played over an injured foot throughout the playoffs and looked forward to the rest and relaxation befitting a champion.

"It feels like worlds of pressure coming off," he explained. "I don't have to have any more ice on my foot, get in a whirlpool or take medication."

John MacLeod, whose Phoenix team was the Western Conference wild card entry in the playoffs, said the triple overtime loss and cross-continent flight with just one day off in between took its toll on both teams.

"Friday night's game definitely had an effect," MacLeod said. "But Boston was feeling it, too. We were worn down, physically, but our mental attitude was great. We had the chances in the fourth quarter, but a couple of good shots just wouldn't fall.

"The key to the game was on the boards. Look at Cowens, Silas and Scott, all in double figures in rebounds. It's hard to combat an effort like that." Boston took a 53-39 advantage on the boards.

With both teams sluggish after Friday, Boston moved out to a 38-33 halftime lead after Phoenix went six minutes in the second quarter with only a pair of free throws.

The Suns came back to tie the score late in the third quarter and trailed 57-56 entering the fourth. Phoenix moved to its only lead of the second half, 67-66, but two goals by Cowens put the Celtics back on top.

Every Yankee Is Contributing

NEW YORK (UPI) — Dave Pagan and Oscar Gamble, two players who have seen limited action this season, revealed Sunday the one quality that has made the New York Yankees the early season favorites in the American League East.

Pagan, making an infrequent start, pitched a six-hitter for his first victory of the season and Gamble, a reserve outfielder, smacked a three-run homer with two out in the bottom of the ninth inning to give the Yankes a 5-2 victory over the Oakland A's and a split of their doubleheader. The A's won the opener 3-2 on Phil Garner's two-run single.

The one ingredient mainly responsible for the Yankees success this season has been the contribution each player on the club's 25-man roster has made in an overall team effort. Every member of the squad has made his presence felt at one time or another with Pagan assuming the unlikely role of the "stopper" Sunday when he halted New York's first serious slide of the year, a four-game losing streak. He retired the last 16 men he faced in order.

Gamble, obtained from the Cleveland Indians in the off-season, has seen relatively little action this season with the wealth of talented outfielders on the club.

The split, combined with Baltimore's doubleheader loss to the Minnesota Twins, widened the Yankees lead over the second place Orioles to 4 1-2 games in the A.L. East.

"It looked like somebody up there didn't want me to pitch," said Pagan, after making his first start of the year. "My wife didn't even come because whe thought we'd only play one game," he added, alluding to the threatening skies under which the doubleheader was played. "It was a great day, there was nothing rotten about it."

The Yankees tied the game in the ninth when Thurman Munson tripled with one out and Chris Chambliss singled him home. Following Carlos May's single, Rollie Fingers relieved Paul Lindblad and gave up a single to Graig Nettles but Claudell Washington threw out Chambliss at the plate. Gamble then belted his fifth home run of the season into the rightfield bleachers.

Vida Blue, with relief help from Fingers, gained credit for the first game victory.

Oakland's Stan Bahnsen, who had a no-hitter until Roy White singled with two out in the sixth, was driven from the nightcap in the eighth on Gamble's double and Lou Piniella's pinch-hit single, which accounted for the first New York run.

That old Paul Richards magic is working new miracles with the much-maligned Chicago White Sox pitchers.

Richards, once Hall of Famer Carl Hubbell's favorite batterymate who later contributed largely to the success of the White Sox'-Virgil Trucks and Billy Pierce in the 1950s and the Baltimore "Baby Birds" of Steve Barber, Jack Fisher, Jerry Walker and Milt Pappas of the 1960s, is making new winners of castoffs and unproven youngsters like Jesse Jefferson, Pete Vuckovich and Ken Brett.

As Vuckovich said recently: "I figure if Mr. Richards caught behind Babe Ruth, then I ought to listen to him."

Sunday, Vuckovich pitched six plus innings in the first game of a doubleheader sweep by the White Sox over the Cleveland Indians to gain his fourth win in five decisions. In the second game, Brett and Jefferson combined on a threehitter as the Chisox blanked the Tribe 5-0.

The double victory put the surprising White Sox four games over .500 (25-21) in the American League West and lent more credence to the fact that the 67-year old Richards, in his second term as Chicago manager, hasn't lost his touch.

"The big difference in coming here from the Yankees is that I'm getting a chance," said Brett who is now 3-0 with a 1.61 earned run average after being acquired by Richards from New York three weeks ago. "Paul has been helping me to slow my motion and get a more effective changeup. I now have a different grip and it's basically a new pitch."

Jorge Orta's fourth inning triple scored Lamar Johnson with the only run Brett and Jefferson needed in the nightcap, while in the opener, the White Sox eked out a 3-2 victory when Bucky Dent broke an 0-for-32 slump with a fourth inning triple and then scored what proved to be the winning run on Jim Essian's single.

Said Richards (who serves as his own pitching coach) after the latest success by his underrated pupils: "Vuckovich, Brett and Jefferson probably wouldn't have gotten their chance until the doubleheaders began mounting up. But when Wilbur Wood go hurt, they got their opportunity and they're all taking advantage of it."

Elsewhere in the American League, Minnesota swept two from Baltimore, 3-2 and 11-6; Boston put away California 4-1; Milwaukee edged Kansas City 4-3 and Texas mauled Detroit 16-6.

Red Sox 4, Angels 1

Cecil Cooper and Carl Yastrzemski knocked in two runs apiece as the Red Sox knocked oout Nolan Ryan after 3 1-3 innings. Yastrzemski's RBI single in the seventh was his 4,000th total base. Dick Pole, 2-3, went seven innings for the win.

Twins 3-11, Orioles 2-6

Larry Hisle hit a three-run homer to spark a 17-hit Twins' attack in the nightcap, while Dan Ford's solo homer with one out in the ninth won the opener. Ford, who now has 33 RBI, also had a a pair of two-run singles in the second game. Bill Singer, in his first start since coming over from Texas in the Bert Blyleven trade, won the opener, outdueling Jim Palmer.

Brewers 4, Royals 3

Sixto Lezcano's two-out 14th inning single brought home Don Money to end the near-four hour see-saw game. Money opened the 14th by walking on four straight pitches from loser Marty Pattin. The Brewers took a 3-2 lead in the 11th only to blow it when Kansas City tied the score in the bottom of the inning on a triple by John Mayberry and a single by Hal McRae.

Rangers 16, Tigers 6

Bill Fahey's two-run single and Lenny Randle's two-run double highlighted a seven-run fifth inning off three Detroit pitchers to back the eight-hit pitching of Nelson Briles (5-2). The Rangers batted around in the fifth as well as seventh but the only two home runs of the game came by Tigers, Ben Oglivie (5) and Jason Thompson (3).

Piniella, Shea at Dietz Stadium

Pat Kept Her Mind on Game

NEW ROCHELLE (UPI) — A lack of concentration on the golf course can sometimes be disastrous, but in Pat Bradley's case, inattention was exactly what she needed.

"The last time I was in a playoff, I lost to (Sandra) Haynie, and I was awed by the name," Bradley said Sunday after winning the $76,000 Girl Talk Classic.

"This time I didn't pay attention to (Judy) Rankin's name."

Bradley, in fact, didn't even watch Rankin, the leading money winner on the LPGA tour this year, while Rankin was putting on the second hole of a sudden death playoff.

"I just listened to hear if it went in," she said. "I felt if I saw her stroke it and miss it that would be the last picture in my mind, so I didn't watch it. That kind of thing has affected me before."

Rankin did miss, three-putting the second extra hole for a bogey. Bradley made her own putt, a four-footer for par, to win the $14,000 top prize.

It started as a four-way playoff with Sandra Post and Bonnie Lauer also involved following a tie at 217, one over par for 54 holes, but Post and Lauer were eliminated when Bradley and Rankin birdied the first extra hole.

The three-putt green gave Rankin her fifth successive playoff loss including three in a four-week stretch last spring, but it was no stranger than some of the miseries that befell some other top players.

Consider:

Betty Burfeindt, the LPGA champion, needed four shots to get out of a bunker at the second hole, and eventually finished three shots behind. Sandra Palmer, the Women's Open champ, blew a three-stroke lead with a bogey-bogey-par-double bogey stretch and skied to 79, her highest score of the year. And Laura Baugh's hopes for her first victory ended when she three-putted the final green from 12 feet for a bogey. She was one shot out of the playoff.

And of course there was Bradley herself, making bogeys at the 17th (a topped drive) and 18th holes (a hooked drive into an unplayable lie) to blow a two-stroke lead and force the playoff.

"I was a little shaken coming in on 18," she admitted. "I think now I should have taken a 3-wood and just played for position."

Bradley, who shot 72-73-72, said "I guess I was gripping the club a little tight" at that point.

It's understandable.

In the year's first tournament, at Miami, she also thought she had a victory, leading Rankin by two shots with three holes to go. Then Bradley hit her next drive in the water, Rankin made birdie, and Rankin won.

Despite the loss, Rankin—who birdied three of the last eight holes down the stretch— received $5,933 that raised her earnings this year to $72,775 and kept her goal of the LPGA's first 100-grand year in sight.

"It's a good payday,z she said, without the slightest trace of a smile. "But $9,000 (the difference between the playoff winner and losers was actually a little over $8,000) three-putts aren't something you throw a party about."

For Pradley, 25 and a third-year pro, her first U.S. victory raised her earnings for the year to $33,035.

Sutton Is an Unhappy Dodger

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Don Sutton, who threw a temper tantrum after his third loss in a row Tuesday night and then failed to show up at Dodger Stadium Wednesday night, is unhappy but he won't say why.

"I have a lot of things eating at me," he disclosed following a 10-3 Los Angeles Dodgers' romp over the New York Mets Sunday. "As hard as I try, I can't blot them out of my mind.

"But I've decided I have to try to shut out everything else when I go on the field and just concentrate on getting the hitters out. I'm not going to tell any one what the other things are. My personal life is my personal life and it's nobody's business but my own unless it affects my performance.

"There are a lot of things that I'm not at liberty to discuss. Apparently nothing can be done about them. I'm glad I have a good friend like Larue Harcourt. He can try to iron out my problems."

Harcourt is Sutton's agent but the 31-year-old righthander declined to reveal if his problems were contractural. During the offseason, the Dodgers attempted to trade him to the New York Mets but he rejected it, having that right as a player with 10 years of major league service, the last five with the same club. The Dodgers sought Tom Seaver and Jon Matlack.

Sutton compiled a 16-13 record last season and was critical of the way he was handled by his manager, Walter Alston.

After a 6-0 loss to the San Francisco Giants Tuesday night in a game in which he went all the way, he shattered a mirror and a chair in the Dodger dressing room. He called the Dodger front office the next night and said he was staying home with his family. The Dodgers said he would not be fined.

"I have no regrets about turning down the trade," Sutton told reporters. "But I'm disappointed at the chain of reactions that occurred after the Seaver trade fell out. A lot of unusual things have happened. I don't think I could correct them by talking about them with you."

Now 5-6, Sutton added, "If I make a change, I want it to be to the other league. It's nothing personal but that's the way I feel."

The Dodgers, who had lost nine out of 13, salvaged the finale of a three-game series with a 15-hit attack after being stopped by Seaver and Matlack on Friday and Saturday nights. Dave Kingman, who drove in nine runs with four home runs, was held hitless.

The Dodgers open a four-game series with the National League East-leading Philadelphia Phillies tonight. Rick Rhoden, 4-0, will go for Los Angeles against Ron Reed, 4-1.

The Philadelphia Phillies may have the "steal of the year" in pitcher Jim Kaat.

The Phillies' National League rivals all recognized the potential of Philadelphia power and defense before the start of the season but agreed that their pitching was suspect.

Now Philadelphia pitching is looking stronger and stronger almost every day — and one reason is the 37-year-old Kaat, winner of 239 major league games who they acquired from the Chicago White Sox during the winter for infielder Alan Bannister and pitchers Dick Ruthven and Roy Thomas.

Kaat got off to a faltering start in the National League but won his second straight game and raised his record to 4-2 Sunday when he went the distance to give the Phillies a 9-3 triumph over the San Francisco Giants. What's more, Kaat is discovering that it's more fun to play in the NL where there is no designated hitter rule.

In the NL, pitchers can hit as well as pitch — and Kaat is an excellent hitter. He went 3-for-4 and knocked in three runs Sunday and in his last two games has four hits, including a homer and two doubles, in seven at bats.

"How you win is not important," commented Kaat Sunday while gloating about his hitting. "I got key outs. Giving up nine hits is no crime, not for me anyway, because I'm never going to overpower anyone."

Kaat contributed a two-run single in the seventh and a run-scoring double in the eighth as the Phillies dealt John Montefusco his fifth loss against six victories and restored their NL Eastern Division lead to 6 1-2 games. Gary Thomasson had three hits for the Giants.

The San Diego Padres defeated the Pittsburgh Pirates 6-1, the Cincinnati Reds routed the St. Louis Cardinals 13-2, — the Atlanta Braves beat the Montreal expos 14-8, and the Houston Astros scored 2-0 and 5-1 victories over the Chicago Cubs in other NL games.

Padres 6, Pirates 1

Enzo Hernandez and Ted Kubiak each drove in two runs and Brent Strom pitched a seven-hitter for his sixth win for the Padres, who dealt the Pirates' John Candelaria his fourth setback. A "Jacket Day" promotion helped the Pirates set a home crowd record of 51,726. Hernandez and Dave Winfield had three hits each for San Diego.

Reds 13, Cards 2

Bill Plummer, filling in for the injured Johnny Bench, drove in seven runs with a homer, triple and single as the Reds buried the Cardinals with a 17-hit attack. Pat Zachry allowed four hits in seven innings to raise his record to 5-1 while Pete Falcone suffered his fifth loss against three victories for the Cardinals.

Braves 14, Expos 8

Rowland Office drove in four runs, three with a homer, and stretched his hitting streak to 12 games, in Atlanta's victory that swept a three-game set with the Expos. Office had four hits and Tom Paciorek three for the Braves while Jack White had three for the Expos.

Astros 2-5, Cubs 0-1

Joacquin Andujar pitched a two-hitter in the first game and Gilbert Rondon went 6 1-3 innings for the victory in the second game in the Astros' sweep of the Cubs. Bob Watsn's run-scoring single and Roger Metzger's sacrifice fly accounted for Houston's runs in the first game while Cesar Cedeno and Jerry DaVanon had two hits each in the second game.

Tom Kite reacts to birdie putt

It Took Momentum to Get Tom Kite Going

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — It takes a little momentum to get a kite going and one named Tom is no exception.

Aided by some verbal shoves from a few of his fellow golfers, 26-year-old Tom Kite won the first pro golf tournament in his four-year career Sunday by defeating Terry Diehl in the fifth hole of a sudden death playoff at the Bicentennial Golf Classic.

Kite shot a five-under-par 66 and Diehl had a 68 to tie at 277, seven under par after regulation and forced the sudden death which Kite won when he parred the fifth extra hole and Diehl bogeyed.

The end came on the 15th hole where the playoff started with a bogey by each and returned there when both Kite and Diehl matched par on the 16th, 17th and 18th that were used for the other extra holes.

Diehl, also 26, drove into the rough, something he had done the first time, and Kite hit the fairway. After Diehl put his second shot in the rough left of the green, Kite hit the green. He two putted from about 12 feet after Diehl's shot out of the rough went 25 feet by the pin.

Kite said he was thinking when Diehl drove into the rough for the second straight time on that playoff hole: "You give me another chance and I'm not going to miss this one."

The victory was worth $40,000 to Kite, while Diehl got $22,800. Jerry Pate was third with a 278 total and Ray Floyd, Larry Nelson and Jerry McGee were tied for fourth at 269.

In back of them, at 280, was Grier Jones and Ken Still, while Bob Gilder was alone at 281.

Kite started the day's play at the Whitemarsh Valley Country Club in fourth place and three strokes back of five players who were tied for the third round lead.

"A couple of people came up to me before the round and told me I could win this," Kite said. "But three strokes off and ten guys in front of me, I wasn't thinking that much about it."

Kite said he was "dogging it down the third hole" after two routine pars and Roger Maltbie, winner of a sudden death a week ago, was going down an adjacent fairway and yelled over, "go get 'em, Tom, you can win this one easy."

Kite promptly birdied that third hole by chipping in off the green from 40 yards out and "everything really started rolling."

Kite, an early finisher, had a lead, but waited while several others out on the course threatened to move ahead of him.

Pate, and Nelson did climb to eight under with birdies on the 16th hole. But both bogied the 17th and missed a chance to be in the playoffs when Pate bogeyed the 18th and Nelson had a double bogey.

Diehl, playing ahead of Pate and Nelson and on the 18th green at seven under, had a chance to win the tournament if he made a 12-foot uphill put that would have given him a birdie. The puck slid past to the right of the hole.

Diehl had another opportunity to win on the first playoff hole, the 15th, when Kite was threatened with a double bogey. But slammed in a tricky six foot puck from the fringe to match Diehl's bogey.

"I thought I had Tom there," Diehl said. But Kite said: "It was really one of those days when everything went right."

Four U.S. Netmen In Bid for Title

PARIS (UPI) — Wojtek Fibak, riding an incredible string of upsets in recent months, Monday stood between American Eddie Dibbs and a quarter-final berth as the seeds at the $210,000 French Open Tennis Championships clashed for the first time

Dibbs, the No 5 seed, was scheduled to meet the ninth seeded Fibak in the first of four matches over the next two days as four American seeded players try to clinch places in the final eight — an unprecedented show of strength by U S players at the world's top clay court tournament

The play of Fibak has put Poland on the tennis map In a span of two months recently, he beat Guillermo Vilas to win the Swedish Open, Bjorn Borg in the Monaco Open and Manuel Orantes to carry off the British hard-court title in Bournemouth Also, he teamed with West German Karl Meiler in Kansas City to win the WCT doubles title

Fibak's success has turned Poland into a tennis conscious nation It had never before produced a world class player but now, as Fibak says, "everyone knows the names of the big players, how they play and how they look"

Fibak did not burst onto the tennis circuit overnight A 23-year-old law student from Poznan, he first played at Wimbledon as a junior five years ago

"At Wimbledon, tennis was so big, so nice Everyone was interested in it There were so many thinks about it that we never realized in Poland,' said Fibak, who can speak English, German, French, Czech and Russian

But the five years of circuit tennis paid off this winter when he made the huge leap from being just another tournament player to being a winner "Now everyone in Poland is proud of me," he said simply

Dibbs, who said he has "a good shot at the title," had the advantge of playing on the slow clay court on which his baseline game flourishes

Baseball Clinic at Dietz Stadium

Piniella, Shea Here Tonight

KINGSTON—New York Yankee outfielder Lou Piniella and former Yankee hurler Spec Shea will be the featured attractions tonight at Dietz Stadium in a baseball clinic that will precede the home opener of the Kingston Braves of the Hudson Valley Rookie League.

The clinic starts at 6 p.m., and the game between the Braves and the New Windsor Rockets will start at 8 p.m.

Area Little Leagues and Babe Ruth Leagues will be represented at the clinic The Kingston Patrolmen's Association is sponsoring the admissions of the Jaycee, American and National Little Leagues along with the Kingston Babe Ruth League, the Saugerties Babe Ruth League will be sponsored by the Sawyer Ambulance Service

The Saugerties Little League is being sponsored by the Heritage Restaurant, Roy Helsmoortel Insurance, Kaye Sports, Buono Funeral Home, Jack Keeley of Keeley's Korner and Jim Gage of Sports Huddle.

The Braves, a perennial bridesmaid in the HVRL's Northern Division, will seek their second win of the year against the Southern Division contender Rockets. Kingston opened its campaign with a 5-4 win in New Paltz Saturday.

Braves manager Jerry Hawkins has a fine array of talent at his disposal this year. Bob Marz, Larry Panella and Tom Whitaker, all sluggers from the New Paltz State camp, are joined by such standouts as Rich Koegel of Penn State and Charlie Mazzola of Ulster County Community College. On the pitching staff are Kevin Coughlin of Jacksonville University, Saugerties High School star Tim Cole and veteran Tom Gallo.

Kingston is expected to battle to the wire once again for divisional honors with the defending champion Poughkeepsie Lasers. The Marlboro Jets, the New Paltz Falcons and the Wappingers Ions comprise the rest of the Northern Division.

In the Southern Division, the powerhouse Newburgh Atoms will defend against New Windsor, the Monroe-Woodbury Crusaders, the Newburgh Nuclears and the Pine Bush Stars.

Hawks or Blues For Bobby Orr

BOSTON (UPI) — The saga of former Boston Bruin star Bobby Orr may be settled this week once and for all

Admitting he is "damaged goods," Orr said Sunday he will sign this week with either the Chicago Black Hawks or St Louis Blues

He made the prediction in an interview from Toronto with reporter Russ Conway of Lawrence Sunday, a subsidiary of the Lawrence, Mass., Eagle Tribune.

Orr, who became a free agent last week, said he regretted leaving Boston after 10 years, but added, "it looks like I'll be headed to the Chicago Black Hawks or St. Louis Blues.

"My lawyer, Alan Eagleson, is going to meet with these two teams in Montreal and I have told him I want it cleaned up this week"

A Black Hawks spokesman said club President William Wirtz and General Manager Tommy Ivan talked at length with Eagleson in Bermuda last Thursday and planned to meet with him again Tuesday in Montreal during the annual National Hockey League meetings

However, both Wirtz and Ivan were scheduled to fly to Montreal late Sunday and would be available for a meeting with Eagleson today

Orr said since becoming a free agent last week that the Boston club had made stipulations in its last offer of $350,000 per year over the next five years.

" .I would not have received one cent if I went to training camp next September and was unable to pass a medical (examination) which would prove to the Bruins that I could score 120 points

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

TUESDAY, JUNE 8

Your birthday today: This year offers a clean break from past limitations. It is up to you how you use available opportunities. Express yourself clearly without raising controversy over irrelevant issues. During the stress of transition, relationships either become set or lapse. Today's natives are firmly committed once they make a promise.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Before going ahead with a sound idea, you must know costs and relevant facts. Confront and compete with rivals. Get verification before you act.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): People who've remained quiet for a long time make sudden changes now. Your projects gain from temporary delays: rethink a few details.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Your work reaches a critical point where you must be accurate and honest. You can make a constructive move or let the temporary stress upset an old arrangement.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Money gets out of hand if you mix in matters that are none of your business or answer a plea for help. Relate incidents entertainingly.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Hold on! Direct your responses only at those who ask for them. Despite an abrupt change of mind, don't switch things around at the last minute.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): People are a bit edgy, and pass the mood along in thoughtless words and actions. Skip the shoptalk, listen attentively and save yourself emotional tension.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You're of great service rescuing something important for someone you care about. Expect no gratitude; accept no thanks. Leave cash reserves untouched.

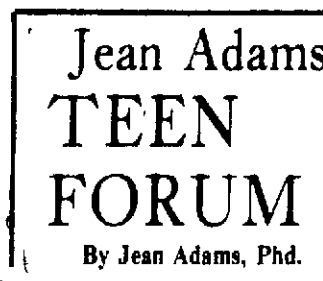
Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Make sure of places, times and details before losing contact with your informant. Personal matters conflict with employment; a balance is hard to manage.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec 21): Stand aside if drastic moves are launched. Old problems remain because people are obstinate. High authority, institutions are no help.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Friends say you're too organized; you see them as inconsistent. Truth is in between, but a compromise is unlikely. Mutual acceptance is the key.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Don't be provoked—look after your interests. Improve health with jogging, lunch-hour walks or gardening. Offer emotional support to those in distress.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Stop feeling sorry for yourself; be thankful things go as well as they do. By helping others pick up the pieces, you learn something useful.



Jean Adams TEEN FORUM

By Jean Adams, Phd.

SLOPPY: My sister is sloppy. She throws her clothes on her chair. I tell her to clean it up, and she does. But the next day the chair is full of clothes again.

What can I do? — Sick of it in Pennayivania.

(A.) Some people are natural pilers. Every time they clean up an old pile of litter they make a new pile somewhere else.

You have the right solution. Clean up the pile or piles every day — or oftener.

But I am not sure your "telling" your sister again and again what to do is the best way to get her to improve. Maybe you can persuade your mother and father to give her some orders and see that she follows them.

That is THEIR job, you know.

Then, when she carries out their orders, you can compliment her on how nice her room (or maybe her part of the room you two share) looks. By complimenting her you will encourage her to make things look even nicer.

That is being positive. Being positive gets the results you want and makes people like you too.

ONE GIRL, TWO BOYS: (Q.) I need advice in a hurry. I have been trying for a month to go out with this girl Sandy, I like her. But my best friend, who knows that I like her, asked her out and she said yes.

Do you think I should still try to go out with her? And what do you think of this so-called friend of mine? — Upset in Connecticut

(A.) He must have good taste. Sandy is a likable girl. You like her. You should not condemn another boy for liking her.

Yes, ask her out, if you haven't already done so. And if you have, ask her again.

If she prefers you, she will no doubt let your friend know in due time. If she prefers him, she will probably let you know.

But until she makes a choice, the field is open for both of you.

(Write to Dr. Jean Adams, care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 2402, Houston, Texas 77001. Every letter is read, but because of the great number received Dr. Adams cannot send personal replies.)

East's deception backfires

Jeff Westheimer: This year it was won by Allen Sontag and Peter Weischsel, one of the best young pairs today."

Jim: "I was unable to play this year, but judging by the way Peter and Allen played, I doubt very much if we could have repeated."

Oswald: "Allen and Peter gained a lot of points when an opponent's attempt to fix them backfired. East's one notrump was pure whimsy and gave Peter a chance to bid two hearts. Allen tried a three-club cue bid. Peter jumped to four hearts and Allen bid six.

Jim: "There wasn't any real problem in the play. Peter drew trumps and attacked spades by cashing dummy's ace and his own queen. When East showed out (obviously East's notrump had been pure whimsy), Peter was able to finesse against West's jack. He had to lose a club at the end but he could afford it."

Report At Least Six Dead As 310-Foot Dam Bursts

IDAHO FALLS, Idaho (UPI) — No one paid much attention when water began seeping through the 310-foot Teton Dam. But then a whirlpool appeared ominously near one corner and the earth-fill dam burst, sending millions of gallons of water racing through the Upper Snake River Valley.

Daryl Grieg was fishing Saturday when he looked up to see a "giant wave that looked like it was 30 feet high" rushing at him. Grieg, 22, rode a logjam in the flooded Teton River until he climbed to safety in a tree.

By the time the water level over 300 flooded square miles dropped Sunday, at least six persons were reported dead because of the disaster and numerous others were listed as missing.

About 7,000 homes were ruined in the rush of water, mud and debris, some 30,000 persons were evacuated, and thousands of head of cattle were drowned.

Those who could returned to mud-filled homes and farms today to find other danges awaiting them — pesticide-poisoned water, rattlesnakes and diseases caused by the decaying cattle.

President Ford declared the valley a disaster area, making federal recovery funds available.

Officials said two of the dead were fishermen who had been below the dam when it ruptured Saturday. Another was a 62-year-old woman who suffered a fatal heart attack.

Civil Defense operations officer Kent Marlor said the exact death count may never be known. "We're not going to get all the bodies," he said in Rexburg, the town hardest hit by the flood.

"They're gone. They are buried under the mud."

Officials said most of the missing probably had taken refugee at other homes and locations.

Two federal officials said Sunday night a preliminary investigation disclosed a corner of the dam began crumbling because water seeped through three grout curtains between the fill and the rock bottom of the Teton River, but that initially the seepage had attracted little attention.

Then a whirlpool appeared near the corner just before the break, Commissioner Gilbert Stamm of the Bureau of Reclamation and assistant Interior Secretary Jack Horton told an Idaho Falls Airport news conference.

But, they said, valley residents had been given a warning in ample time.

Stamm and Horton denied a report a "ground shift" caused the break.

Getty Hated 'Richest' Tag

LONDON (UPI) — Billionaire J. Paul Getty, who died Sunday at 83, always disliked being called one the world's richest men — not out of sensitivity, but because he felt it classified him as "some sort of freak."

The Minneapolis-born attorney's son, who made his first million by the age of 24, died one minute after midnight, succumbing to a heart attack at his mansion, Sutton Place. He had been in failing health for some time

Noel Bramblett, Getty's long-time assistant, said the oil magnate's body would be flown to California — where Getty grew up — for burial.

"It sounds like you are some sort of freak — the world's tallest man, the heaviest man, the wisest man, the most foolish man, the world's shortest midget," he told a recent interviewer.

He said he preferred to be remembered as a man of many talents — businessman, linguist, art connoisseur, health fanatic.

He said more than once he did not feel guilty about his wealth, but stories about his alleged frugality were legion: how he worked from an inexpensive two-room apartment, how he locked the telephones at his Surrey mansion, how he charged a film company photographing his dogs.

In his recent autobiography he said he intended to donate the bulk of his oil fortune to charitable foundations.

But he also indicated he would provide for his three sons and 15 grandchildren — one of whom, J. Paul Getty III, was kidnaped in Italy three years ago and ransomed for $1.5 million by his grandfather only after the abductors cut off one of young Getty's ears.

Getty said he initially refused to pay the ransom, not out of stinginess but because "I would automatically be placing all others (of his grandchildren) in jeopardy."

The kidnaping was one of the tragedies that wealth brought, but there were others.

Five marriages ended in divorce. His favorite son, George, died of an overdose of barbiturates in 1973.

Residents who live near the 1,000-acre mansion where the billionaire died recalled Getty not as a temperamental recluse but as a man given to generosity.

Eddie Moor, landlord of a local pub, told how Getty would invite groups of orphan children to Christmas parties and others told of the times Getty opened Sutton Place grounds for charity fetes.

"That is not the picture of a mean man," Moor said.

Hays Decision Later This Week

BARTON, Ohio (UPI) — Rep. Wayne Hays, D-Ohio, indicated Sunday he may decide this week whether to step down temporarily as chairman of the House Administration Committee

During a Polish-American picnic and volunteer firemen's chicken barbecue, Hays told UPI he would not comment on his involvement in a sex scandal concerning a woman employe, Elizabeth Ray.

Asked if reports he would resign from the committee after the primary elections were true, Hays said:

"We're under a court order not to discuss this — both sides. But we'll discuss it next week and if I do it (resign) it will only be temporarily. But that's all I can say because we have agreed not to discuss it."

Hays said he attended the picnic and barbecue at the last minute because he "heard about them on the radio." His appearance at the picnic attended by about 30 persons lasted less than two minutes.

He lingered at the barbecue for nearly two hours waiting in vain for a scheduled appearance by the wife of Democratic presidential aspirant Jimmy Carter.

Hays was surrounded by well-wishers at the barbecue.

"This man's the greatest," said John Lippian, 66, of Mannard, Ohio. "My son was wounded in Vietnam and we didn't hear from him for months. But my wife and I went to Wayne's office in St. Clairsville, and in 28 minutes Mrs Hays called the Okinawa Hospital, found my son and we talked to him."

Hays was accompanied by his new wife, Patricia, who said she was "really proud of him. I think he's fantastic."

The congressman accused the "Eastern news media" of "overstating" factors involved in the Elizabeth Ray scandal "in an effort to demean me."

Hays said he was aware a high percentage of his constituents were supporting him, except for "one guy in Flushing (Hays' hometown) who is spreading poison."

"But I prosecuted him during the war for mixing butter and oleo," Hays added.

One of his most vocal supporters grabbed the arm of a UPI newsman, demanded to know what was going to be printed, and said, "Wayne Hays is the greatest congressman alive today and I don't give a damn what anybody else says.

Year Later, Carey Names Four To Review Council

ALBANY (UPI) — A year after the positions were created in answer to public outrage about conditions at local jails and lockups, Gov. Hugh Carey today named four persons to the Citizen's Policy and Complaint Review Council.

The council is an adjunct to the Correction Commission, the prison watchdog agency which was overhauled by the 1975 legislature after extensive public hearings documented the failure of the old commission to adequately monitor conditions in county jails.

Only last month did the Senate finally confirm two of Carey's appointments to the three-member, salaried commission. A third, Herman Schwartz, a controversial Buffalo attorney, was rejected after a lengthy and rancorous hearing process.

An administration spokesman admitted that the delay in filling the council positions was due in large part to the difficulty experienced with the Schwartz nomination.

The seven-member council was intended to act on citizen complaints about conditions at local lockups and advise the commission of the required course of action. The spokesman said three more appointments would be made "in the near future."

Bella Sees $$ Reform

BINGHAMTON (UPI) — Rep. Bella Abzug, D-N.Y., a candidate for the state's Democratic senatorial nomination, says the federal welfare system of reimbursements should be reformed.

Mrs. Abzug, campaigning upstate Saturday, said the federal government should be required to pay localities 75 per cent of the cost of welfare programs instead of reimbursing the state 50 per cent, as is now done.

The Manhattan congresswoman also said statistics belie statements from Republicans, including President Ford, that the economy is improving.

Mrs. Abzug later planned stops in Auburn, Geneseo, Geneva, Olean and Seneca Falls.

She hopes to get the Democratic nomination to unseat Sen. James Buckley, the Conservative-Republican incumbent who also faces an inparty challenge from Rep. Peter Peyser, R-N.Y.
